A Word From the WordWeaver

The following series concerning Comet Elenin was actually begun on September 16, 2011. In order to retain a high level of relevance, it was my intention to complete it and release it prior to Comet Elenin's closest orbital approach to the Earth, which actually occurred on October 16, 2011. However, due to other important writing projects which I wanted to complete and release at that particular time, the publication of this series was delayed. Time passed, and I worked on even more projects, which pushed this series even further back on the shelf.

Well, here it is a year and eight months later, and I am finally getting this series out the door. While some of the astronomical information which is contained in this series is now outdated, being as Comet Elenin passed by the Earth so long ago, nevertheless, I decided to complete this series anyway, and release it, because it contains some important lessons which some people need to read, and take heed to; particularly other Christians who either promote this kind of nonsense themselves, or else who become deceived by the same.

Astronomical Facts Regarding Comet Elenin

Within the global astronomical community, it is known by the scientific name of Comet C/2010 X1. However, most people will recognize it by the popular name of Comet Elenin. Discovered by Russian amateur astronomer Leonid Elenin on December 10, 2010, this long-period comet, which according to astronomers has a heliocentric orbital period of 600,000 years, possessed a nucleus which was approximately three to four kilometers in diameter. However, as it approached the Sun, its coma -- or outer dust shell -- grew to eventually cover a region of space several hundred kilometers in diameter. Despite this fact, it was too faint to be seen with the naked eye, and remained so, even during its closest approach to the Earth, which occurred on October 16, 2011. I will share more about this point in a moment.

Comet Elenin made its closest approach to the Sun -- which is referred to as its perihelion -- on September 10, 2011 at a distance of 0.4824 AU. This was about 72,170,000 kilometers, or 44,840,000 miles. At its closest approach to the Earth on October 16, 2011, it was 0.2338 AU -- or about 34,980,000 kilometers / 21,730,000 miles from our planet. This distance placed Comet Elenin slightly closer to us than the planet Venus. At that time, Comet Elenin sped through the depths of Space at an amazing 86,000 kilometers per hour.

As a result of being bombarded by a CME -- or Coronal Mass Ejection -- emanating from the Sun on August 19, 2011, along with another comet named C/1999 S4, Comet Elenin began to disintegrate. In fact, if you visit the following web page, and scroll down a little bit from the top to August 19, 2011, you will see how Comet Elenin began to lose its steam -- as well as its brightness -- following its encounter with the Coronal Mass Ejection on that date. Please be advised that depending upon when you read this series, the images at the following URL may possibly no longer be at your disposal. As of today -- May 15, 2013 -- they are still available there:

<http://www.aerith.net/comet/catalog/2010X1/pictures.html>

The rate of disintegration of Comet Elenin was such, that by the beginning of November 2011, not only was the comet not visible to the naked eye, but neither was it observable by any of the large ground-based telescopes, such as Hawaii's two-meter Faulkes Telescope North. In short, Comet Elenin totally wimped out when it encountered the powerful forces of the solar orb, and became a no-show.

If you are reading this series on our website, below you will find a java-based animation from NASA's Jet Propulsion Laboratory which shows Elenin's orbit as it passed through our Solar System. Simply click on the various buttons in order to see where Elenin will be located on any particular date. Click on the "Date" button to set the date where you want the animation to start. Click on the ">>" button to see a forward animation from that date. Click on the ">" button to advance one day at a time.

What I have just shared with you are some of the scientific facts regarding Comet Elenin, as dry and as boring as they may seem to some of you. However, as many of you will know, in the wild online world of rumors and conspiracy theories, real world facts are often ignored, and even overshadowed by more exciting personal conjectures and speculations which, while they may possibly include small amounts of accurate scientific information, are more often than not usually quite divorced from reality.

Harold Camping and 2012 Mayan Long Calendar Madness

It shouldn't surprise you to know then that dire prophecies and predictions concerning the arrival of Comet Elenin was just one of so many crazy conspiracy theories which are so often propagated on the World Wide Web by misguided people who don't have a clue regarding what they are talking about. It came on the heels of other online madness, such as Harold Camping's wayward predictions regarding the supposed Return of Jesus Christ and the end of the world. I amply discuss Camping's predictions in the three-part series entitled "The Misguided End of the World Predictions of Harold Camping".

Other recent online madness included the heavily promoted Mayan long calendar and 2012 hype which, incidentally, made a number of book authors and movie directors a lot of money. For my personal views regarding the Mayan calendar and 2012 nonsense, please refer to my series entitled "2012: New Age Deception and Psychobabble", as well as other articles and series which I will list at the end of this current series.

While I was vaguely aware of the Comet Elenin "predictions", and knew that I should investigate the subject further, and then share my own findings with my readers, I intentionally put off doing so, because I was relatively confident that I knew exactly what I would discover once I did begin to delve into the matter. Well, in retrospect, sadly, I wasn't wrong, and it became necessary for me to expose more of this online madness and deception which is polluting the minds of a lot of people, both Christian and non-Christian alike.

Christ's Return and Jewish Feast Days

I finally dove into the Comet Elenin hype early in September of 2011. Sadly, what motivated me to do so was the fact that even some Christians had begun to promote the Comet Elenin craze, and were bending over backwards to try to link it to the Return of Jesus Christ, which they were convinced was going to occur during the Fall season of that same year; that is, 2011. Without going into a lot of detail here, one of the reasons for this belief amongst a number of Christians, is because they believe that Christ's Return is directly tied to -- and in fact prophesied by -- a number of Jewish feast days which occur in the Jewish month of Tishri. Tishri -- which is a Babylonian name -- lasts from September to October on the Gregorian Calendar. These feasts include the following:

1. Feast of Trumpets -- Also known as Rosh Hashanah. The Jewish New Year which is celebrated on the 1st and 2nd days of the Jewish month of Tishri.
2. Day of Atonement -- Also known as Yom Kippur. Occurs on the 10th day of the Jewish month of Tishri. It is considered the holiest and most solemn day of the Jewish year, and is marked by atonement and repentance.
3. Feast of Tabernacles -- Also known as Succoth, Sukkot or Sukkoth. A seven-day feast which occurs on the 15th to the 21st days of the Jewish month of Tishri.

If you would like to learn a little more about these various Jewish feasts, please consider reading my three-part series entitled "The Lamb of God Was a Goat". The tragedy here isn't that these Christians are trying to link Christ's Return to certain Jewish feast days -- because it is possible that they are correct in doing so -- but rather in the fact that they are trying to force God's Word to say what they have chosen to believe, and are bending over backwards by even trying to link Christ's Return to Comet Elenin; a Comet which has now fizzled out and been a no-show.

Equally alarming to me at least, is the fact that some of these people are making some very time-specific predictions, which is a very dangerous practice to engage in. In my view, doing this really amounts to credibility suicide, as I also explain in my series concerning Harold Camping. Furthermore, the Jewish month of Tishri in 2011 came and went, and it is more than evident that Jesus Christ did not return, as per their erroneous, misguided predictions.

On a related note, as I explain in the twelve-part series entitled "Elijah: Where Are the True Prophets of God", sadly, these erroneous predictions by well known American Christian leaders has continued up to our present time. For example, Pastor Ronald Weinland of the Church of God, PKG in the state of Ohio, USA predicted that Christ would return on the Feast of Pentecost on May 27, 2012. When that failed to materialize, he moved up the date to the Feast of Pentecost which falls on May 19th of our current year. That is only five days away, and I for one have no expectations. Meanwhile, Weinland currently sits in a prison cell serving out a sentence for tax evasion.

Another wayward Christian leader who has embarrassed himself recently is noted televangelist Jack Van Impe. He predicted that the Rapture would occur in 2012, and that Christ would return seven years later in 2019. OOPS . . . sorry Impe, but there was no Rapture. You will find more false predictions regarding Jesus Christ's Return in the aforementioned series.

"Comet Elenin Nibiru Planet X & The Day of The LORD" Video

To continue, while it is not normally my habit to watch such things, during early September of 2011 I downloaded a YouTube video called "Comet Elenin Nibiru Planet X & The Day of The LORD". This video was apparently made by a ministry called "Seven Theory Ministries", which appears to be headed by an individual named Scott McAllister. Wanting to give it a fair chance, I watched the video in its entirety. In the video, Scott goes to great length to add a Christian and Scriptural bent to the predictions surrounding Comet Elenin, exactly as I described a moment ago. It is really shameful.

For those of you who may choose to download the video -- that is, if it is even still available -- I advise you to ask the Lord to grant you a good dose of Spiritual Discernment, and to watch any such presentations with a great deal of caution, lest you become deceived, as Scott seems to be. If you doubt that this is the case, then consider that near the beginning of presentation, Scott foolishly states "This is probably the most significant, most important prophetic teachings I've ever done; and so I think by the time you see all what's entailed in this, you may feel the same way." Those are his exact words in the video.

Well, I'm sorry to report that after watching Scott's video, I definitely do not feel the same way as he does at all. In fact, in my view, the way that Scott grabs information from so many questionable and untrustworthy sources, and tries to make it fit Bible prophecy, is downright dangerous. What is so ironic about this, is that as he begins his presentation, he mentions the necessity of cutting through all of the false information that can be found on the Internet, and then turns around and relies upon some of that very information in order to present his case. Consider some of the sources that are used in this deceptive video:

Hollywood Movies and "Deep Impact"

Scott claims that powers of the occult control Hollywood, and that they use natural catastrophe movies to foretell actual future catastrophes on the Earth; not because they really care about people, but rather to gloat about their evil nature. Scott says "We tell the people what we are going to do to them before time, knowing that they are helpless to stop it. That's part of their religion."

As a Christian, I have no doubt that a lot of dark spiritual forces influence what is produced in Hollywood; and I do view Hollywood as a den of iniquity. Furthermore, I don't need to be convinced of the fact that a very liberal spirit pervades that place; and that many movies are produced which clearly display animosity towards our Christian faith; or else they purposely and falsely represent our faith by focusing on the extreme elements of our faith in order to make all Christians look bad, or at least appear ignorant and foolish. I have even made some graphics regarding this topic for my Facebook timeline, as some of you will already know. I in fact refer to Hollywood as "unHolywood".

But my point is, I think that Scott is rather misguided here. For example, in the 1998 movie "Deep Impact", the video makes a point that the president is Black, just like Barack Obama. The implication is that this supposedly proves that the movie contains secret messages for those who have ears to hear. The video also points out that the spaceship in "Deep Impact" is called the "Messiah". Again, the not-so-subtle message that the video creator is trying to get across, seems to be that this is more proof that Christ will return during Elenin's passage by the Earth. In fact, in his video, Scott makes the Messiah line repeat several times in a row in order to drive the point home.

Supposedly, some of the Hollywood movie excerpts that Scott shares in his video contain hidden messages concerning the coming destruction which was supposed to result from Comet Elenin's passage. For example, one reporter in "Deep Impact" learns that the name Ellie really isn't a reference to the president's lover, rather, it really means ELE, which stands for "Extinction Level Event". Conspiracy theorists such as Scott erroneously conclude that it is a future reference to Comet Elenin.

So please tell me; since when does God -- the great Creator of the Universe -- have to rely upon movies coming out of ungodly, antichrist Hollywood, in order to inform and warn His children of things which are yet to come? Isn't that what the Bible and true Prophets of God are supposed to be for? If we have to rely upon Hollywood in order to discover Biblical truth, we are seriously in trouble. I will return to this issue later on in this series.

Hopi and Zuni Endtime Prophecies

Within the Hopi and Zuni belief system, there is a legend or prophecy regarding the Red Kachina and the Blue Kachina. Upon conducting some online research, I learned that kachinas are spirit beings, or gods, in the Pueblo culture, which includes both the Hopi and the Zuni Native American tribes. According to the prophecies, these two spirit beings are supposed to physically manifest themselves as a Red Star and a Blue Star. The appearance of Comet Hale-Bopp in early 1997 -- which the Hopi tribe refers to as "the twins" due to its double tail -- was supposed to have initiated a seven-year period of "final opportunity to change our ways" before the arrival of the Red Kachina.

The Red Kachina -- who is called the Purifier, and who was prophesied to bring the Day of Purification -- was to appear seven years after Comet Hale-Bopp made its appearance in 1997. The arrival of the Red Kachina -- which should have occurred in 2004 according to the times given in the prophecy -- was to have marked the beginning of a seven-year period of great upheaval, suffering and change on the Earth. I imagine that this can be compared to the Christian concept of a seven-year Great Tribulation period, as opposed to those who embrace a three and a half year Great Tribulation period.

The Blue Star Kachina -- who is also called "Saquasohuh" or "Nan Ga Sohu" -- on the other hand, is said to be benevolent. It was supposed to arrive in order to usher in "the forever cycle of the Fifth World". From my research, I was left a little confused regarding whether the Blue Star Kachina was supposed to arrive at the same time as the Red Star Kachina, or perhaps some time after it; not that it really matters at this point in time. Here is why I say this:

According to my understanding, all of these events regarding the Hopi prophecies were supposed to have concluded nine years ago in 2004. Obviously, none of it has happened. We can only conclude then that it is a failed, false prophecy. That being the case, why would any Christian endeavor to connect Christ's Return to it? Furthermore, since when does God have to rely upon Native American false prophecies to inform and warn His children of coming prophetic events?

Sadly, that is exactly what Scott McAllister does. He claims that because Comet Elenin is partially comprised of hydrogen cyanide, it may turn blue, and thus fulfill the Hopi prophecy regarding the Blue Star Kachina. At the video's one-hour mark, Scott clearly says "Comet Elenin; I think might be that Blue Kachina star . . . It's gonna light up like a lightbulb, and it's gonna be a blue lightbulb . . . It will look as bright as a second Sun." So not only does Scott appear to want to believe that the Hopi prophecy is actually true, but he wants his viewers to accept it too. Well, we know how that turned out. Elenin not only did not turn blue, but it fizzled out so that it wasn't even visible to the naked eye. As bright as a second Sun? Sorry Scott, but you failed miserably.

In case you are wondering how Scott justified embracing a pagan belief system such as the Hopi legend, in his video he explains that both Satan and evil spirits know the future, and can reveal it to their human followers. While what Scott says regarding Satan and evil spirits knowing the future may possibly be true -- I believe that there is some evidence in the Scriptures to support this particular belief -- I still have a serious problem with his overall position. Let me tell you why this is so.

Scott states "So a false religion's prophecy, even though the religion is false, doesn't necessarily mean that the prophecy should be ignored." I find that claim a bit troubling. If we know that a religion is false, how can we possibly have the confidence that its prophecies are true, and not just one of Satan's deceptions? Isn't Scott's attitude in fact a foolish invitation to personal deception? Furthermore, his position clearly contradicts verses such as the following, which warn us to flee from the works of darkness. They don't advise us to embrace them, accept them, and much less believe them, or ask others to believe them as well:

"Woe unto them that call evil good, and good evil; that put darkness for light, and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet, and sweet for bitter!"
Isaiah 5:20, KJV

"The night is far spent, the day is at hand: let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armour of light."
Romans 13:12, KJV

"And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them."
Ephesians 5:11, KJV

"Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?"
2 Corinthians 6:14, KJV

"For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works."
2 Corinthians 11:13-15, KJV

2012 and Mayan Long Calendar

Many of you reading this will already be familiar with the Mayan long calendar and the December 21, 2012 psychobabble.

Please refer to my three-part series entitled "2012: New Age Deception And Psychobabble" for my personal views concerning this topic. Well, it seems that Scott McAllister didn't want to wait until December 21, 2012, so he had to find a way to make the Mayan calendar fit into his own personal theology, which dictates that everything has to end in the Jewish month of Tishri 2011, during the aforementioned Jewish feasts, and not fourteen months later in 2012 as many people were led to believe. Thanks to an individual named Carl Johan Calleman, Scott was not disappointed.

In the video, Scott claims that Mr. Calleman is a world renown expert when it comes to the Mayan calendar, which he has been studying for twenty years. According to Calleman, December 21, 2012 was a fictitious date which was invented by the Illuminati in order to confuse people and conceal the truth from them. He claims that the actual date was really October 28, 2011 because the Universal 9th Wave -- which is supposedly the final step in the nine underworlds or cycles of Mayan awakening -- began on March 9, 2011, and would end on October 28, 2011. How very convenient this is for Scott McAllister. Sadly, I am reminded of these verses:

"I also will choose their delusions, and will bring their fears upon them; because when I called, none did answer; when I spake, they did not hear: but they did evil before mine eyes, and chose that in which I delighted not."
Isaiah 66:4, KJV

". . . because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie:"
2 Thessalonians 2:10b-11, KJV

Unless I've already passed on over to the Other Side without realizing it, or am caught up in some kind of a dream state that is so real that I cannot differentiate it from reality, October 28, 2011 came and went, and I am currently positioned here in front of my computer typing out this series. Excuse my sarcasm, but I feel that it is justified in this case. In case you are not aware of it, even the Prophet Elijah seemed to yield to sarcasm and ridicule at times; as we can see by his response to the four hundred and fifty false prophets of Baal in the following verse:

"And it came to pass at noon, that Elijah mocked them, and said, Cry aloud: for he is a god; either he is talking, or he is pursuing, or he is in a journey, or peradventure he sleepeth, and must be awaked."
1 Kings 18:27, KJV

I hope that you can perceive the foolishness of endeavoring to associate 2012 and the Mayan long calendar nonsense with the Return of Jesus Christ, and weren't deceived by the same, as some people apparently were. At any rate, what we see here is that one false prophet -- Scott McAllister -- relied upon another false prophet -- Calleman -- to bolster his own false predictions, and they both ended up falling into the ditch, as in this verse:

"Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch."

Matthew 15:14, KJV

Nancy Lieder, Zecharia Sitchin And Nibiru

If you spend a lot of time online surfing the web, and if you have an interest in the topic of aliens and UFO's, then you are probably already familiar with all of the hype which has surrounded alleged alien contactee Nancy Lieder's "ZetaTalk" website absurdities concerning Planet X. I will be discussing Lieder's folly more at length in the second part of this same series.

You are more than likely also familiar to some degree with the controversial writings of now-deceased maverick author and researcher Zecharia Sitchin, and his firm belief in the existence of a giant, red planet, which he claimed was known to both the ancient Babylonians and the Sumerians as Nibiru, or Marduk. Sitchin widely promoted the belief in an advanced alien race from Nibiru, based on his interpretation of some ancient clay tablets which discuss the ancient gods who were referred to as the Anunnaki.

On a side note, it does appear that the false god Marduk is mentioned at least one time in the Old Testament of the King James Version of the Bible. However, it is spelled slightly different; that is, as "Merodach". In fact, one of the sons and successors of Babylonian King Nebuchadnezzar appears to have been named in honor of this false god. This king, whose name was Evilmerodach, in fact freed Jewish king Jehoiachin from prison. As I point out in other articles, Jehoiachin had been taken prisoner to Babylon decades earlier by King Nebuchadnezzar; as we see here:

"Declare ye among the nations, and publish, and set up a standard; publish, and conceal not: say, Babylon is taken, Bel is confounded, Merodach is broken in pieces; her idols are confounded, her images are broken in pieces."
Jeremiah 50:2, KJV

"And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, on the seven and twentieth day of the month, that Evilmerodach king of Babylon in the year that he began to reign did lift up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah out of prison;"
2 Kings 25:27, KJV

"And it came to pass in the seven and thirtieth year of the captivity of Jehoiachin king of Judah, in the twelfth month, in the five and twentieth day of the month, that Evilmerodach king of Babylon in the first year of his reign lifted up the head of Jehoiachin king of Judah, and brought him forth out of prison,"
Jeremiah 52:31, KJV

Scott Claims Nibiru is Red Star Kachina

If you are not familiar with Zecharia Sitchin and the Nibiru and Anunnaki controversy, please refer to my four-part series entitled "The Nibiru, Planet X, Wormwood Controversy". At any rate, having declared that Comet Elenin might possibly be the Blue Star Kachina, in order to cement his misguided beliefs, and convince his audience of the same, Scott obviously needed a celestial object to represent the Red Star Kachina as well. As it turns out, once again, New Age nonsense met his needs.

According to the video, Scott appears to believe that Nibiru may in fact be the Red Star Kachina, and that the governments and astronomers of the world are trying to conceal Nibiru's approach. In other words, in typical Hollywood fashion, the entire global community of astronomers and governments have gotten together in a grand conspiracy to keep the truth from us until it is too late. Of course, the usual reasoning that is offered to explain this, is that if such knowledge were to become public, it would result in chaos and panic. Thus, governments and scientists choose instead to purposely keep us in the dark until our sudden and unexpected demise. As one continues to watch the video, it becomes apparent that Scott apparently embraces this unfounded conspiracy theory.

Please go to part two for the continuation of this series.

Google Sky and Alleged SPT Nibiru Image

So exactly how did Scott weave together his personal tapestry of delusion? Thanks to the popular Google Earth program, it wasn't too difficult. Similar to a number of other people who have used the very same procedure before him, using the "Sky" portion of the Google Earth app, in the video, Scott enters the alleged sky coordinates for the planet Nibiru, which were obtained from an image which he claims was taken by the South Pole Telescope. Below you can see a copy of the image, which I acquired online. You can clearly see the coordinates -- 5h 53m 27s, -6 10' 58 -- in the lower lefthand corner:

[Put South Pole Telescope image here]

Scott claims -- based on information which he has obtained from others -- that the large red blob that we see in this image is Nibiru. He also vocally theorizes in his video that the white orbs may possibly be some of Nibiru's moons. Not willing to accept Scott's claims at face value, I undertook my own online research. Allow me to share some of my findings with you. I think once you have read everything that I have discovered, you will become convinced that the Google Sky and Nibiru craze is simply a stupid, poorly-executed rumor, which has been perpetuated and propagated by gullible, naive people who didn't take the time to properly research their sources.

South Pole Telescope and DSS Consortium

While it is not visible in this particular image, in other images that I have seen online in certain videos, there is a "Image © 2007 DSS Consortium" string located on the bottom of the plate. At first glance, this appears to confirm the claim that the image was taken in 2007 sometime after the South Pole Telescope first went into operation. Concerning the telescope itself, I discovered that it is a ten-meter, wide-field, microwave/millimeter-wave Gregorian telescope that is located high above sea level at the Amundsen-Scott South Pole Station in Antarctica. But the question which we need to ask ourselves is whether or not the alleged image of Nibiru really originated at the SPT.

While I cannot conclusively prove it one way or the other, I do have some serious doubts about the SPT claim, and I will tell you why. The "DSS" in the name stands for Digital Sky Survey. From the information that I was able to find on the Google Earth website, as well as on a few other sites, the DSS Consortium appears to be an astronomy-based collective which consists of The Space Telescope Science Institute, the California Institute of Technology, the Royal Observatory, in Edinburgh, Scotland, and the Australian Astronomical Observatory. The telescopes which are used by these four institutions are located in California and New South Wales, Australia.

Now here is the catch: I was unable to find any information which even mentioned the South Pole Telescope in conjunction with the DSS Consortium. Furthermore, according to Google's own website, the images that are included in their Digitized Sky Survey are based on photographic data that was obtained using the Oschin Schmidt Telescope that's located on Palomar Mountain in California, and the UK Schmidt Telescope that is in New South Wales, Australia. While I suppose that one of the aforementioned institutions may have possibly been given access to the South Pole Telescope at some time, I honestly don't see why that would be necessary, being as they already have quite a few telescopes at their disposal.

Doubts Regarding South Pole Telescope Image

As I stated a moment ago, the Google Earth website states that all of the images that are included in their Digitized Sky Survey, are based on photographic data that was obtained using the Oschin Schmidt Telescope that's located on Palomar Mountain in California, and the UK Schmidt Telescope that is in New South Wales, Australia. Following is an excerpt from the Google Earth website:

----- Begin Quote -----

"The Digitized Sky Survey (DSS) was produced at the Space Telescope Science Institute under U.S . Government grant NAG W-2166. The images of these surveys are based on photographic data obtained using the Oschin Schmidt Telescope on Palomar Mountain and the UK Schmidt Telescope. The plates were processed into the present digital form with the permission of these institutions.

----- End Quote -----

Despite what Google itself states concerning the origin of the many images that are included in Google Sky, it seems that some people are so deluded, that they will continue to promote their own erroneous beliefs no matter what. It should not come as a surprise to us then that people such as Scott McAllister -- and others -- continue to say in their videos that the alleged image of Nibiru was taken by the South Pole Telescope. That they say this really makes me wonder how much in-depth research they conducted before making their videos.

To reiterate, in all of the videos that I have watched, and in all of the online comments that I have read where this Nibiru image is mentioned, the very same claim is made; yet no one offers any proof whatsoever that the image was really made using the South Pole Telescope. In short, they expect us to believe them, just because they say so. I am sorry, but it is my opinion that placing such blind faith in the words of someone who we do not even know personally is a very foolish practice.

V. M. Rabolu: "Hercolubus or Red Planet"

As you can see, in the alleged image of Nibiru, the name "Hercolubus" is printed next to the red blob; and next to that is the name "Nibiru" in parentheses. I suspect that many people who are not familiar with this issue, and who are probably not astronomy buffs, will automatically assume that Hercolubus is the designated scientific name for the object in question. Let me make it clear to you that this is most certainly not the case. In fact, neither Nibiru or Hercolubus have anything to do with real astronomy. At this point in our discussion, we are going to examine the recent history of the name Hercolubus.

In 1999, now-deceased Columbian New Age author V. M. Rabolu published a book entitled "Hercolubus or Red Planet". In it, he promoted the idea that Barnard's Star is really a planet, which was known to the ancients as Hercolubus. According to Rabolu, Hercolubus was responsible for the destruction of the mythical continent of Atlantis. Furthermore, Rabolu was likewise convinced that Hercolubus will approach the Earth again at some point in the future.

Samael Aun Weor: "The End of the Kali Yuga"

However, V. M. Rabolu -- whose real name was Joaquin Enrique Amortegui Valbuena -- was not the first person to propose the existence of a planet called Hercolubus. In fact, it is very evident that he borrowed his ideas from fellow Columbian New Age author -- and founder of the Universal Christian Gnostic Movement -- Samael Aun Weor, who in the 1970's proposed that Hercolubus was part of a distant solar system which revolves around Barnard's Star. In a lecture he delivered in 1976 in Guadalajara, Mexico, called "The End of the Kali Yuga", Weor -- whose real name is Víctor Manuel Gómez Rodríguez -- talks about how the Earth will experience a polar shift at the end of the Age of Aquarius. According to Weor, this polar shift will result in the submergence of our current continents, and obviously, the destruction of most of mankind.

Sinking of Mu / Lemuria and Atlantis

However, in his lecture, Weor also points out that this cycle of destruction will be accelerated due to the approach of the planet Hercolubus. Following is an extract from his lecture, translated into English, which I discovered on the Gnostic Teachings website:

----- Begin Quote -----

Eventually, the poles will convert themselves into the equator, and the equator into the poles. This will occur when our solar system concludes its defined voyage around the zodiacal belt.

Therefore, when the solar system arrives to the exact degree of original departure, the continents of the planet Earth will submerge themselves into the bottom of the ocean.

An unusual event is going to accelerate this process of swift change to the axis of the planet Earth. I am referring to the planet Hercolubus. This planet is six times bigger than the planet Jupiter. The planet Hercolubus belongs to the distant solar system of Tylo. The solar system of Tylo is rapidly approaching our solar system, and Hercolubus is rapidly approaching Earth.

Modern astronomers have before their sight the planet Hercolubus, or, as it is known by modern science, the Barnard star.

This planet is a powerful giant that will pass through our solar system at an angle. When this happens, the revolution of the axis of the planet Earth will accelerate violently. Then the final catastrophe will occur.

Some scientists believe that they will be able to push this monstrous planet away with nuclear explosions, but this will be useless. It will be impossible to push this tremendous mass of a planet out of the way with mere nuclear bombs.

This same planet brought Atlantis to an end. Before Atlantis existed, it annihilated the existence of another continent. We know very well that the continent of Mu or Lemuria sank within the waters of the boisterous Pacific Ocean after 10,000 years of earthquakes and incessant volcanic eruptions.

When Hercolubus passed at an angle through our solar system during the end of the Kali Yuga of the Atlantean continent, then the universal flood occurred causing displacement of all the seabeds. It was the end of Atlantis.

Easter Island, off the coast of Chile, and Australia are remnants of the Lemurian continent. The Caribbean Islands are remnants of Atlantis.

When Hercolubus once again passes through an angle of our solar system, you can be absolutely sure that another great catastrophe will occur. This indicates that the destruction that is approaching is not the first, nor will it be the last.

----- End Quote -----

While Weor's claims will no doubt sound rather fantastical to most of my readers -- gullible, naive New Agers aside -- the problem is that back during that period in the 1970's, there was certain misguided astronomical evidence which seemed to support his claims.

Barnard's Star

Let me begin by sharing some information regarding Barnard's Star. This information was garnered from different pages on the Wikipedia website, as well as from a few other astronomy and science-related websites.

[Insert Barnard's Star image and animation here]

Barnard's Star is a very low-mass, class M4, red dwarf star that is located almost six light-years -- or over thirty-five trillion miles -- from our planet in the constellation of Ophiuchus, or the Snake-holder, as it is commonly known. It is the fourth-closest known individual star to our Sun, after the three components of the Alpha Centauri star system.

Project Daedalus

Due to its relative closeness to the Earth, as well as the belief at that time that it might possibly host a number of planets, Barnard's Star was considered as a potential target for an unmanned interstellar spacecraft, which was going to be designed by the British Interplanetary Society's Project Daedalus study during the 1970's. According to the design study, the spacecraft was expected to reach Barnard's Star in forty-seven to fifty years, after achieving a speed over several years of twelve per cent the speed of light. I was unable to find information concerning exactly what happened to the Daedalus Project. As far as I know, the spacecraft was never built, but I cannot confirm this one way or the other.

Red Dwarf Stars

Concerning red dwarf stars, typically, such stars have a mass which is forty per cent, or less, of our own Sun. As a result of the relatively low temperatures in their cores, as well as the fact that energy is generated at a slow rate, red dwarfs emit very little light. In fact, the luminosity of even the largest red dwarfs is only about ten per cent that of our own Sun. In short, in astronomical terms, red dwarfs are small, cool, dim stars. Because of this, no red dwarfs are visible to the naked eye from the Earth. Astronomers believe that red dwarfs constitute the vast majority of the stars in our own Milky Way galaxy. Regarding Barnard's Star, it has an apparent magnitude -- which is a measure of its brightness as seen by an observer on Earth, normalized to the value it would have in the absence of the atmosphere -- of approximately 9.54; so again, it is not visible to the unaided eye.

Peter van de Kamp's Theory

As I mentioned a moment ago, it was previously believed that Barnard's Star might possibly host one or more planets. This theory was particularly popular from about 1963 to 1973, and resulted from Dutch astronomer Peter van de Kamp -- who was the director of the Sproul Observatory at Swarthmore College -- announcing that he had discovered a periodic wobble in the motion of Barnard's Star. He attributed this stellar wobble to the presence of one or more gas giant planets. Since that time, Mr. van de Kamp's assertions have been refuted, and attributed to human error; even though up until the time of his death in 1995, van de Kamp himself never admitted to any such error.

Barnard's Star Poses No Threat to Earth

Be that as it may, it is plausible to assume that certain New Age gurus -- such as Weor and Rabolu -- latched on to van de Kamp's erroneous information, and began to disseminate their false belief that Barnard's Star -- which they equated with the mythical planet Herculubus -- was on a crash course with the Earth. According to the information I uncovered, while it is indeed true that Barnard's Star is slowly approaching our Solar System -- it is referred to as the "Runaway Star" -- it will not make its closest approach to the Sun until about the year 11,700 AD; so why the current hype? Why all of this New Age sensationalism and nonsense?

To set the record straight, at that distant time in 11,700 AD, Barnard's Star will be within about 3.8 light years of our Sun. To put this figure into perspective, this distance is only slightly closer than our closest stellar neighbor at this current time; that is, Proxima Centauri. In short, based upon this information, Barnard's Star poses no threat to our planet; not now, or ever.

Strange Beliefs of Samael Aun Weor

If there is one thing I can tell you, it is that Samael Aun Weor was a seriously misguided loose cannon who twisted the Scriptures to his own convenience. For example, in one part of his 1976 lecture, he claims that God created people as hermaphrodites. In other words, Adam and Eve -- who Weor appears to believe were Lemurians -- had both sexual organs in their bodies, and were thus able to procreate without engaging in sex. Consider this wild quote from his lecture:

----- Begin Quote -----

The Lemurians were gigantic hermaphrodites. We can see their representation in those sculptures which are in Tula, Mexico. The Lemurians were oviparous.

The Children of the Second Sun reproduced themselves by budding, but the Children of the Third Sun reproduced themselves in an oviparous way. It is clear that the hermaphroditic body of Lemurians ovulated, and that the ovum that escaped from their ovaries was already fecundated.

The Lemurians were male-female (hermaphrodites), as the Bible states:

In the day that God created man, in the likeness of God made he him; Male and Female created he them, and blessed them and called their name Adam, in the day when they were created. -Genesis 5:1-2

Therefore, it is stated that within a determined period the egg within the womb of the hermaphroditic Lemurian body was open and a child was born from it. This child was then nourished from the breasts of the father-mother.

----- End Quote -----

I can only assume that Weor derives his misguided belief in the Original Pair being hermaphrodites from the phrase "male and female created he them"; but that is not what the verses are saying by any means. Mr. Weor's problem was a problem of perspective. Those verses are first addressing Adam as being created male -- thus the phrase "made he him" -- and likewise then stating that the Original Pair consisted of one male and one female; and thus the phrase "male and female created he them". In short, first we have a "him", followed by a "them".

Weor's New Age doctrines are filled with all kinds of weird ideas, such as the above. For example, he also believed that a race of miniature people -- similar to the Lilliputians -- existed in Bolivia, South America. Consider this quote that is taken from the very same lecture:

----- Begin Quote -----

The Nahuas stated that the Lemurians converted themselves into birds. I can tell you as a testimony of this that in Bolivia, South America, people discovered a small race of what we would call Lilliputians.

These Lilliputians were only 10 or 20 centimeters in stature, tiny men and women who inhabited a small town. This town resembled a toy town. These tiny beings disappeared one night by placing themselves into the fourth dimension and transporting themselves to another, safer place. They had to escape, as they were afraid of becoming a public "freak" show.

Many people were trying to get into the place in order to see these tiny beings before their escape, but now only the tiny town remains very well guarded by the natives of that area. Thus, this is how we understand that it is very true that the Children of the Third Sun were converted into birds.

----- End Quote -----

Samael Aun Weor was familiar with the Bible, and he knew how to quote from the Scriptures, but many of his interpretations were really out in left field. This is precisely what makes some of these false prophets and deceivers so dangerous. In other words, a lot of naive, gullible people assume that just because a person can quote verses from the Bible, they must know what they are talking about, and they must be telling the truth. My friends, be warned! It just isn't necessarily so.

Furthermore, Samael Aun Weor's concept of Salvation through Jesus Christ is by no means the same as what most Christians believe. Similar to many other New Age adherents, he embraced a kind of christ consciousness type of belief system, which is popular with so many misguided people today, including, I might add, Oprah Winfrey.

While some of this information may seem silly and boring to some of you, the reason why I am sharing it with you, is so that you can recognize the dangerous doctrinal poison that is being foisted upon an ignorant public by these deceivers and false prophets. But the real tragedy is when people who claim to be Christian preachers and teachers, rely upon this very same nonsense, as a means to supposedly validate their own claims regarding Christ's Return. I must wonder if Scott McAllister even understands what he is really promoting when he uses an image with the name Hercolubus on it. Does he know the origin of this name?

Nancy Lieder, Zeta Reticuli and Planet X

In light of the previous information concerning the alleged planet Hercolubus, should it really come as a surprise to us that misguided and self-proclaimed alien contactee, Nancy Lieder, would then attempt to use Weor's and Rabolu's ideas to legitimize her own claims regarding the soon arrival of the so-called Planet X? Now, let's be honest here. Anyone who makes the preposterous claim that they are in telepathic communication with gray aliens from the Zeta Reticuli binary star system -- by means of a brain implant no less -- really needs to have their head examined, literally. If you are not familiar with the so-called gray aliens of Zeta Reticuli, I encourage you to consider reading some of my other articles which address the topic of aliens and UFO's.

Planet X, Hercolubus and Nibiru Morph into One

At this point in our discussion, it is important to point out that over the years, it seems that what were originally seen as being separate issues -- that is, Planet X, Hercolubus and Nibiru -- have somehow morphed into one and the same object. In other words, when New Age adherents, alien and UFO buffs, and conspiracy theorists use one of these names, they appear to be talking about the very same thing; that is, a large, red planet -- either real or artificially fabricated -- which is allegedly home to an ancient race of giants who are known as the Anunnaki.

As I briefly stated in part one, the general belief is that when this planet -- which is also referred to as Marduk -- makes its next pass near the Earth on its 3,600 year orbit, it will bring great destruction to our planet; a catastrophe which national governments and astronomers are supposedly keeping hidden from us, in order to avoid panic.

Zecharia Sitchin Rejects Leider Claims

Not everyone has agreed to this forced amalgamation of terms. In fact, Zecharia Sitchin -- who viewed himself as a serious archeologist and scholar -- was quite opposed to the idea of Nancy Leider's Zeta Reticuli fantasies being associated with his work. Of course, it must also be noted that no serious scholar has ever embraced Sitchin's claims of an ancient race of alien astronauts from the planet Nibiru, or Marduk, who the ancient Sumerians referred to as the Anunnaki. Partially as a means of distancing his own beliefs from those of Nancy Leider, in 2007, just a few years before his death, Zecharia Sitchin published a book called "The End of Days: Armageddon and Prophecies of the Return", in which he established the date for Nibiru's last Earth passage as being in 556 BC.

"End of Days": Nibiru Won't Return Until 2900 AD

On page 296 of his "The End of Days" book, Sitchin clearly says "Either way, the next arrival of Nibiru is way in the distant future." Sitchin then proceeds to clarify what he means on pages 297-298, where he writes the following:

----- Begin Quote -----

One of the great mysteries in our solar system is the fact that the planet Uranus literally lies on its side -- its north-south axis faces the Sun horizontally instead of being vertical to it. "Something" gave Uranus a "big whack" sometime in its past, NASA's scientists said -- without venturing to guess what the "something" was. I have often wondered whether that "something" was also what caused the huge mysterious "chevron" scar and an unexplained "ploughed" feature that NASA's Voyager 2 found on Uranus's moon Miranda in 1986 (Fig. 128) -- a moon that is different in numerous ways from the other moons of Uranus. Could a celestial collision with a passing Nibiru and its moons cause all that?

In recent years astronomers have ascertained that the outer large planets have not stayed put where they were formed, but have been drifting outward, away from the Sun. The studies concluded that the shift has been most pronounced in the case of Uranus and Neptune (see sketch, Fig. 129), and that can explain why nothing happened out there for many Nibiru orbits -- then suddenly something did. It is not implausible to assume that on its "Deluge" orbit Nibiru encountered the drifting Uranus, and one of Nibiru's moons struck Uranus, tilting it on its side; it could even be that the strike "weapon" was the enigmatic moon Miranda -- a moon of Nibiru -- striking Uranus and ending up captured to orbit Uranus. Such an occurrence would have affected the orbit of Nibiru, slowing it down to about 3450 Earth-years rather than 3600, and resulting in a post-Diluvial reappearance schedule of circa 7450, circa 4000, and circa 550 b.c.e.

If that is what had happened, it would explain the "early" arrival of Nibiru in 556 b.c.e. -- and suggest that its next arrival will be circa a.d. 2900. For those who associate the prophesied cataclysmic events with the return of Nibiru -- "Planet X" to some -- the time is not at hand.

----- End Quote -----

Clearly then, even if the planet Nibiru really does exist -- which I doubt -- according to Sitchin, it won't be zeroing in again on our particular region of Space until about the year 2900 AD. Obviously, this totally invalidates the claim which was made by Nancy Leider and other New Age adherents a few years ago, in which they stated that Nibiru was -- or still is -- fast approaching the Earth. It also negates the claims which Scott McAllister has made in his "Comet Elenin Nibiru Planet X and the Day of the LORD" video.

Nancy Leider's Planet X Folly

In case you are not familiar with the story, it seems that as with so many other online false prophets, misguided gurus and deceptive peddlers of psychobabble we have seen in recent decades, Nancy Leider made the foolish mistake of embracing a specific date for the arrival of Nibiru -- or Planet X if you prefer -- that being March 2003. When that date came and went and nothing happened, and Planet Earth was left intact, well, you know the story. It seems that these deceivers always find a way to justify their mistakes; at least in their own eyes.

In Nancy's case, she blamed it on her gray alien friends. She claimed that those little tricksters had purposely given her false information, which she now refers to as the "White Lie". Why, of course they did! Shame on those Zeta Reticulans! Oh, excuse my sarcasm. Needless-to-say, the number of people who continue to follow Nancy's gray alien lunacies has diminished in recent years. I also discuss Nancy Leider's deceptions in the four-part series entitled "The Nibiru Planet X Wormwood Controversy" for those of you who may be interested in reading it.

Please go to part three for the continuation of this series.

Astronomer Percival Lowell and Planet X

As I mention in the eight-part series "Alien Life, Extrasolar Planets and Universal Atonement", as well as in "The Nibiru Planet X Wormwood Controversy", it is also important to point out that over one hundred years ago, the term "Planet X" was actually associated with valid, astronomical research. More specifically, astronomer Percival Lowell used it to describe a hypothetical planet which he believed was responsible for what he perceived as perturbations in the orbits of Uranus and Neptune. Today, however, the astronomical community no longer believes that Planet X even exists.

Pluto Reclassified As Dwarf Planet / Plutoid

[Place Pluto animation here]

Caption: This is a computer-generated map of the planet Pluto which was created from still images which were taken by the Hubble Space Telescope. This map is synthesized true colour, and is among the highest resolutions possible with current imaging technology.

Furthermore, if we take into consideration the fact that a number of years ago, in the midst of a considerable amount of controversy, the planet Pluto was demoted and reclassified by the International Astronomical Union as a dwarf planet -- or plutoid -- and is no longer considered the ninth planet, this makes the term Planet X even more obsolete, at least for the time being. Pluto's fate was sealed on July 29, 2005, with the announcement of the discovery of a new Trans-Neptunian Object which has approximately the same size as Pluto. This object is now called Eris. Please refer to the aforementioned series for additional information concerning Trans-Neptunian Objects and the Kuiper Belt.

No Serious Astronomer Accepts Nibiru

At this point, it must be clearly stated that there are no serious astronomers who actually believe in the existence of Hercolubus or Nibiru; at least there are none that I am aware of. The reason why this point is important, is because even if the "Nibiru" photograph was really taken by the South Pole Observatory, it becomes evident that the names Hercolubus and Nibiru were most certainly not added to the image by any of the astronomers there. What does this imply? It suggests that someone else must have added them, in order to promote their own misguided beliefs regarding Hercolubus, or Nibiru. Was it Scott McAllister, or someone else? Well, obviously, I simply don't know. Regardless of who added the names to the image, I can only view it as an intentional act of deception.

Scott McAllister's Delusions

As I stated in part one, despite the questionable origin of the alleged South Pole Telescope image of Nibiru, Scott used the coordinates on the image as a basis for launching into his speculations regarding the so-called Blue Star Kachina and Red Star Kachina in his "Comet Elenin Nibiru Planet X & The Day of The LORD" video. If we consider the very shaky foundation upon which Scott establishes his predictions, it is really no surprise to me that he became so misguided and deceived by all of this New Age nonsense; even to the point that he viewed it as, in his words, "the most significant, most important prophetic teachings I've ever done."

Even at this current time, I am still attempting to figure out exactly what "prophetic teachings" are supposed to be contained in Scott's video. I see nothing in it which, in my opinion, contains any element of being a true prophecy from God. All I see is satanic deception and delusion, a number of false predictions, as well as a heavy dose of speculation and personal theories. I see a man who desperately wanted to convince us that Jesus Christ was going to return during the Fall feasts of the Jewish month of Tishri, which obviously did not happen in 2011, and which has not occurred since then either.

Google Sky Conspiracy and 53m 27s, -6 10' 58

As we discussed in parts one and two of this series, based on the coordinates that are found on a supposed photograph of the planet Nibiru -- or Hercolubus, if you prefer -- that was allegedly taken by the South Pole Telescope, similar to other people before him, in his "Comet Elenin Nibiru Planet X And The Day of The LORD" video, Scott McAllister proceeds to use the "Sky" portion of the Google Earth program. It is at this point that we will pick up our discussion from part one.

Upon entering the coordinates -- 53m 27s, -6 10' 58 -- into Google Sky, everything appears fine at first, or is it? At this point, just as other people have done, Scott zooms out a bit, and we discover that part of the image is blocked out by a large black vertical rectangle. If you are viewing this article on the Endtime Prophecy Net website, you can see the black rectangle in the image below. In order to prevent this page from loading too slowly in your web browser, I am using a reduced image here. But please don't worry, because I will be providing a number of closeup images as we continue our discussion, in order to totally refute the misguided claims that are being made by Scott, and by other people just like him.

The Cut-Off Star

Scott then attempts to convince his video audience that the blacked-out rectangle is the result of a conspiracy by the entire global astronomical community, as well as by national governments, to conceal the presence of Nibiru in the image, and to keep the truth from us -- regarding Nibiru wreaking havoc on the Earth -- until it is too late. In order to fully convince us of this supposed "fact", he calls our attention to the bottom portion of the blacked-out rectangle, where we can clearly see that a star is cut in half, leaving just the lower half of its rays in view. In Scott's view, this cut-off star is the so-called "smoking gun" which undeniably proves that whatever is in that blacked-out rectangle, was purposely concealed from us by someone somewhere. But is it really?

Being as this portion of the Google Sky image is important to our discussion, below you can see an enlarged version of the same. In addition to the cut-off star, I have also left the coordinates that were automatically added by Google Sky intact. This is so that you can determine exactly where the 53m 27s, -6 10' 58 position is located in the image. I have also left the 2007 DSS Consortium copyright intact as well, so that you can see that this image was made in 2007 by the DSS Consortium:

Image is Available But Hidden

To further convince us that conspiratorial powers are at work here, Scott proceeds to click on the little info icon that is located in the lower portion of the blacked-out rectangle. The reason why you cannot see the info icon in the above image is because I turned off that feature in Google Sky so as to make a clearer image without any unnecessary distractions. However, upon clicking on the info icon, we see a short message which states "this is the prove that the image is available but hidden", as you can see by the enlarged image below:

[Place hidden image message graphic here]

Amazingly, that is as far as Scott discusses the contents of the dialog window. I believe that he has a motive for doing so. You need to understand that his objective is to convince us that what he is saying regarding the data purposely being concealed is true; and showing his video viewers the "image is available but hidden" text will accomplish that task. But what about the rest of the contents of the dialog window? Are we supposed to simply ignore that it is there? By his silence, Scott seems to be suggesting this very thing.

Even though it is right in front of our eyes, Scott makes absolutely no attempt to tell his viewers that if they click on the "Click here for the post" link that is located in the same dialog, they will be taken to an online conversation where the blacked-out area and the missing data is discussed quite at length. Not only that, but the forum discussion in fact informs us how and where we can find the data that is missing from the Google Sky app. So the question that needs to be asked is this: If Scott is sincerely interested in preaching the truth to his viewers, then why didn't he make any attempt to share that crucial bit of information with us, or at least point us in the right direction?

Why Didn't Scott Mention the Link?

I can only arrive at a few possible conclusions. One is that when Scott conducted his own research regarding Comet Elenin and Nibiru, he was simply being lazy, and therefore did not even bother to click on the link himself. Thus, he was not aware of the fact that the answer which he sought for would easily be found in that forum. Does this sound plausible and acceptable to you?

Not to me. Human nature being what it is, it is difficult for me to accept that this is what really happened. Scott was no doubt aware that the link to the forum discussion was there. It is obvious that he clicked on the info icon at least a few times while he conducted his own research, as well as when he made his video. Each time, that forum link stared him right in the face and beckoned for his attention. So it is hard for me to believe that during all those times that he stared at that link, his curiosity never prompted him to click on it.

Discover the Truth no Matter What

Unlike Scott, as I conducted my own research regarding Comet Elenin and Nibiru, my primary interest was in obtaining the truth; even if it meant that whatever information I found might possibly contradict what I currently believe. My job as a Christian writer and evangelist is not just to fill my readers' heads with my personal theories and speculations. It is to discover the truth, particularly Scriptural truth, and then to share it with my readers. That means that I need to travel down a lot of informational roads, in order to see where they lead, and to determine if what they have to offer is trustworthy and safe from a Christian perspective. It is a given that I determine this by how much the information agrees with -- or contradicts -- God's Word.

Thus, when I saw the link to the forum in the dialog window, I didn't hesitate to click on it. I wonder if Scott did the same. If he did, then he is guilty of purposely withholding information from his viewers which contradicts what he has chosen to believe. He has purposely tried to manipulate our beliefs, to conform to his own.

Our Job: Convince People of the Truth

Now, please don't get me wrong. As evangelists and ministers of God's Word, that is exactly what we are supposed to do. We are supposed to try to convince unsaved people of their sin; of their need for a Savior; of the fact that Jesus Christ is that Savior; and that through an act of repentance and belief, they can be forgiven, and can become born-again recipients of Salvation and Eternal Life. In short, we preachers need to be good talkers and good writers. We need to be able to persuade people of our Christian beliefs. That is in fact what I do in every single article and series that I write. I am a salesman for Jesus Christ and the Word of God. Of course, I don't mean that in the sense of financially profiting from it. I mean in the sense that it is my desire to convince people that God's Word -- the Bible -- is absolutely trustworthy and true.

Preaching Guidelines and Bounds

However, there are certain guidelines by which we must abide, and certain bounds within which we must remain, as we conduct our evangelistic tasks. Simply stated, as I point out in my 1997 article "Biblical Cafeteria, or the Whole Course?", we cannot pick and choose what we want to believe in the Bible. If I were to reject certain portions of God's Word, simply because they don't agree with or even contradict my personal theology, then I would be wrong. If I were to engage in this very same practice as I go about teaching others, then it is evident that I would be even more in error.

I suspect that this is what Scott may be doing in his video. I believe that the primary reason why he does not draw his viewers' attention to the forum link that is included in the dialog window, is because he realizes that they would find information in the forum discussion that would challenge -- and in fact contradict -- what he is trying to convince his viewers to believe concerning the blacked-out area and the missing data in the Google Sky app. So exactly what is this vital information, and why is Scott so afraid that people might discover it? Read on and find out.

There is No Conspiracy or Hidden Data

As I began to read the forum discussion, I learned that upon discovering the blacked-out rectangle in the Google Sky app, people were simply relying upon other astronomy programs and websites to find the missing data. In fact, some posters even went as far as to provide images in the message thread, so we novices would not have to struggle with finding the data for ourselves. If anything, what this proves is that, contrary to what some conspiracy theorists and Nibiru/Hercolubus fanatics have been promoting, there is no sinister plot or treacherous conspiracy to keep us all in the dark until we meet our doom, as Nibiru crashes into our planet, side swipes it, or whatever conspiracy theorists have imagined. No data has been purposely hidden from us. There is absolutely nothing threatening hidden in that area of the sky.

The Google Sky program is simply missing the data for that particular area of the sky for some reason. I do not know if it is due to human error -- such as a programming mistake -- or if it's the result of data corruption, or if perhaps it is related to some other problem. There were a few individuals in the message thread who seemed to represent Google. Even they openly admitted that their program still has a few bugs that need to be worked out. Now, if there's anything remotely suspicious about this, it is that according to the discussion that I was reading, the data has been missing from the Google Sky app since 2007; and apparently, no attempt has been made to add it to the program since that time.

Now, before you get all excited and exclaim "Uh-huh! There is proof of a conspiracy!", let me tell you something. Space is a very huge place. It has taken dedicated astronomers years to image all of the objects that are included in the Digital Sky Survey, and a great many of those objects have not even been properly identified and classified yet. I don't remember the exact figure now, but their work has also involved a huge number of photographic plates which all had to be processed, properly formatted, etc., in order to be used in the Google Earth program. Given the obviously intricate process that has been involved, I don't think that anyone should be surprised to learn that error crept in somewhere along the way, so that data is missing in that particular area of Space in the app.

Let me remind you again that, to my knowledge, that data is only missing from the Google Earth program. I availed myself of two other astronomy websites, as well as a downloaded app; and the data that is missing in Google Earth is present in all of the others.

SIMBAD: Recovering the Missing Data

It was through the aforementioned discussion forum that I was led to the SIMBAD Astronomical Database. This online database is located at the CDS -- Centre de Données astronomiques de Strasbourg, or Astronomical Data Center of Strasbourg -- in Strasbourg, France. You can freely access SIMBAD directly at the following URL, and I encourage you to do so:

<http://simbad.u-strasbg.fr/simbad/sim-fcoo>

Being as I am not an astronomer -- and therefore do not have any experience with astronomical databases, or with how to use sky coordinates with them -- I was disoriented at first. However, sufficient help is offered on the website, so that eventually, I figured out what I needed to do. There are different methods and coordinate formats which can be used to feed data into the system. When I enter the coordinates 5h 53m 27s, -6 10' 58 into the SIMBAD Database using the Sexagesimal format with colons as field separators -- like this 5:53:27-6:10:58 -- along with SIMBAD's default settings -- (FK5, 2000, 2000), radius: 2 arcmin -- the thumbnail you see below is displayed on the right side of the page:

[Place IRAS 05509-0612 thumbnail image here]

However, if I click on the flash-powered "CDS Simplay" image that is located in the "Plots and Images" section of the same page, I am taken to a new page which displays the full image, which you can see below. Please note that I have reduced the image by about fifty per cent, as otherwise, it would take a lot longer for this page to load due to the size of the file:

[Place IRAS 05509-0612 full image here]

A table on the same page that's situated just below the above image identifies three objects in the image, along with their coordinates, type and other data. The top whitish-blue object is a star that is identified as "HD 39592". This star has the coordinates of 05 53 21.8535 -06 06 32.122. The whitish object with orangish-yellow rays that is situated just about in the center of the image is identified as an "IR Object"; that is, an infrared object. It has an ID of IRAS 05509-0612. It has the coordinates of 05 53 22.5 -06 12 12. Finally, the largest object that is located in the bottom left area of the image -- which has the red and blue "halos" around it -- is identified as a PulsV* type star with an ID of HD 39634. Its coordinates are 05 53 34.6893.

As I said a moment ago, I am not an astronomer. As such, I will not even pretend to understand all of the data that is included on the page. However, because the coordinates in the top left corner of the image change as you move your mouse around, it was really easy for me to find the coordinates that we are interested in; that is, the coordinates which are found on the image that supposedly originated from the South Pole Telescope, and which allegedly shows Nibiru, or the planet Hercolubus, if you prefer. To refresh your memory, those coordinates are 5h 53m 27s, -6 10' 58". I have added a red square to the above image, so that you can see precisely where the coordinates are located; that is, to the northwest of the IR Object that you see in the middle of the image. The coordinates are actually on the northwest side of the object that is contained in the red square.

In other words, what you are actually seeing in the previous image, is the very same area of Space that is displayed as a black rectangle in the Google Earth program. For those of you who may be Doubting Thomases -- simply because you want to believe that there is a dark conspiracy in progress -- I will now prove to you beyond a shadow of a doubt that this is in fact the missing data from the Google Sky program.

Common sense dictates that if the Google Sky image, and the SIMBAD image are displaying the same area of Space, or at least part of the same area of Space, then both images must contain common elements. As you can see below, this just so happens to be case. The image on the left is the very same image from the Google Earth program that I shared with you above. I have simply cut out the lower portion in order to concentrate on the part that is most revealing. The image on the right is also the same image from SIMBAD that I shared above. All I have done is drawn a large red square on it, in order to roughly show you the part that is blacked out in the image on the left. I didn't aim for perfection, but it is close enough to make my point.

[Place Google Sky and SIMBAD images here]

Google Sky and SIMBAD Comparison

Let's make a few simple comparisons between the two images, shall we?

1. The coordinates at the top middle of the Google Sky image on the left, are located just to the northwest of the object that is enclosed in the small red square in the SIMBAD image on the right. In other words, the coordinates are actually inside of that small red square.
2. The hidden star with the long ray that is cut off in the lower left corner of the Google Sky image is the very same star that we see in the lower left corner of the large red square in the SIMBAD image on the right. We have already seen that this star is a PulsV* type star identified as HD 39634.
3. It is easy to determine that in both of the above images, the coordinates that were acquired from the alleged image of Nibiru, are located at about the one o'clock position from the aforementioned star that is in the lower left-hand corner.
4. If you carefully examine all of the star formations that are located along the bottom edge of the blacked out area in the Google Sky image on the left, and compare them to the star formations that are located just below the bottom red line in the SIMBAD image on the right, you will obviously come to the conclusion that they are the very same stars. It is impossible to dismiss this fact, unless one intentionally wants to be deceived. If anyone reading this series is still unable to see how they are the very same region of Space, I will gladly email you copies of larger images from Google Sky and SIMBAD, as well as an image where I actually overlay the Google Earth image with the SIMBAD image, in order to fill in the missing data. The celestial objects match up perfectly.

Clearly then, there is no secret data which has been hidden from us by astronomers and national governments, in order to purposely keep us in the dark until we are obliterated by a fictitious planet named Nibiru -- or Hercolubus -- which is supposedly in a 3,600 year orbit around the Sun. As we have already discussed, even Zecharia Sitchin plainly stated that according to his personal calculations, Nibiru is not due to arrive in our vicinity for a very long time; that is, if we even accept Sitchin's theories regarding the existence of his imaginary planet Nibiru, which I don't.

New Set of Coordinates for Nibiru

Well, believe it or not, but while one would think that this strange story regarding world governments and astronomers all colluding together in order to conceal the dangerous approach of Nibiru from the unsuspecting citizens of the world would slowly fizzle out once it had been revealed that there really is no missing data in the photographic plates, this was not the case. While I cannot remember now exactly how I acquired the additional information, at some point I discovered that a new set of coordinates was being offered for the position of the mythical planet of Nibiru, or Hercolubus. In other words, as naturally occurs with all celestial objects, due to the passage of time, Nibiru had moved, and somehow a resourceful person had apparently discovered where the planet killer was now lurking; or at least so it was alleged.

As one of my astronomer friends basically told me some time later, some people are just so desperate to believe what they want to believe, that they will continue to do so, even when the actual facts contradict their belief, theory, or whatever it is that they are promoting. At any rate, when I input the alleged new coordinates for Nibiru -- 6h 09m 48s, 22 27 54 -- the SIMBAD database provides information for a star that is identified as "HD 252532", as well as the resulting thumbnail that you see below:

[Place HD 252532 thumbnail image here]

When I follow the same procedure as described above and go to the full image page for star HD 252532, below is the result. Again, please note that I have reduced the image by about fifty per cent, as otherwise, it would take a lot longer for the page to load in your web browser due to the file size:

[Place HD 252532 full image here]

In this image, HD 252532 is the bluish-white star that you see right about in the center of the image. There are twelve stars and two X-ray objects that are identified in this image. What you will find interesting -- as do I -- is that the very large dirty orange object that is located to the bottom right of HD 252532 is not identified in the image. In fact, this same object can be seen at this same coordinates in Google Sky, as well as in the Aladin Sky Atlas program, or at the Aladin Sky Atlas website, which you can access at the following URL. It is also located in Strasbourg, France at this URL:

<http://aladin.u-strasbg.fr/java/nph-aladin.pl>

According to conspiracy theorists, the large, dirty orange object that we see in these images is supposedly the planet Nibiru, or Hercolubus if you prefer. But is that really what it is? Not being an astronomer myself, my next step was to contact people who would know; that is, actual astronomers. One individual who I contacted in November of 2011 has been the director of the University of Guam Planetarium for about twenty years now, so if anyone could help me to identify the strange object, she would be the one. As you can see by her combined responses below, while she was unable to provide me with a definitive answer, she was inclined to believe that the dirty orange object is merely some type of processing error:

----- Begin Quote -----

Thank you for the pictures. Although I am no nearer to identifying it, I can certainly tell you what it looks like. It looks like some kind of processing error. I'm assuming that the image is digital from its inception and not from film because if it were from film it would simply be a flaw in the film.

It hasn't been identified, I suspect because no one wants to own up to the error that created it.

The other thing it could easily be is a "planetary" nebula (the aftermath of a stellar explosion). It has the circular appearance with the dark hole in the middle that's characteristic of many of them. You might want to go with that explanation even if it's unidentified because it's easy to believe. And lord knows, these people just HAVE to believe in something!

----- End Quote -----

In addition to contacting the director of the University of Guam Planetarium, in November of 2011 I also contacted the project director of the Pittsburgh Planetarium, who in turn contacted a number of other planetariums and astronomers. One response I received during that time is the following:

----- Begin Quote -----

The blown-up images reeeeeallly look like a diffraction artifact/lens flare-ish thing and the scope's 4-vane secondary supports still are discernible in it.

I'm thinking it's an optical-to digital plate-scanning artifact of some kind . . .

It does not impress me as being authentically part of the star field.

----- End Quote -----

So once again we see that the inclination is to believe that the "object" is really not an actual object in the star field whatsoever, but rather some kind of artifact that was created while the plate was being processed. I will be honest and tell you that the above quotes are the only relevant responses that I received regarding my inquiries concerning the dirty orange object. There were a few additional responses, but they didn't contain anything useful that I could use in this series. For whatever their reasons, I received no additional information from any of the aforementioned individuals. It may be that they just got too busy with their real work as astronomers and no longer had time to address this issue. It could also be that they simply became uncomfortable with discussing the issue. I don't think that there are very many serious astronomers who want to be associated with the Nibiru/Hercolubus fantasies.

Please go to part four for the continuation of this series.

Deception, Misguided Teachers and False Prophets

If -- as Scott McAllister and other wannabe prophets claim -- it was really the aim of astronomers and national governments to conceal this astronomical data from the public, then in my opinion, they did a very poor job of it. Why would they block this information from the Google Sky program, but then not do the very same thing with other astronomy apps and websites? It just does not make any sense. Does anyone really believe that the U.S. government is that sloppy? So again, people who have been promoting these misguided beliefs -- such as Scott McAllister -- are not only deceived themselves, but they are deceiving other people as well, regardless of whether it is intentional or not. Scott may be very well-meaning, but he is still leading people astray with his misguided theories and personal speculations. I am reminded of verses such as the following:

"But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived."
2 Timothy 3:13, KJV

"For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears;"
2 Timothy 4:3, KJV

"But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction."

2 Peter 2:1, KJV

"Beloved, believe not every spirit, but try the spirits whether they are of God: because many false prophets are gone out into the world."

1 John 4:1, KJV

So to reiterate what I stated earlier, it appears that Scott is intentionally providing only the information which will support his theology, while ignoring or purposely omitting the information which might expose its weaknesses. He wanted so much to believe that the Lord was going to return during the Jewish month of Tishri in 2011 when the aforementioned Jewish feast days occur, that in his video he lines up his evidence so that it all points to that event.

If you actually take the time to watch the video, you will quickly realize that while Scott attempts to appear neutral and fair at the beginning of his presentation, by presenting both sides of the issue -- that is, the government and the scientific community's point of view, as well as the skeptics point of view -- as the video progresses, he makes statements to purposely try to discredit and cast doubt on what both the government and scientists are saying regarding Comet Elenin. Clearly, he has an agenda; and that agenda is to build the suspense, and to prepare you for his final "revelation" near the end of his presentation. We will discuss his "revelation" a bit later.

Passing the Blame When Predictions Fail

While Scott uses words like "maybe", "perhaps" and "potential" in different parts of his video, my impression is that he only uses those words as a way to protect himself, just in case he turns out to be wrong; which, as now has become very obvious, he most certainly was. He was embarrassingly wrong.

What some of these online false prophets tend to do when their predictions fail, is to simply argue "Well, I was telling you what someone else said. I was just sharing their information with you." In other words, they try to pass the blame, as well as their failure, on to someone else. However, throughout this video, Scott makes some very clear statements regarding what he personally expects to happen, insofar as Comet Elenin is concerned. He is not quoting from someone else. He is telling us what he thinks will happen. As such, being as those things have not happened, we can hold him to his words. Scott cannot blame someone else for his wayward predictions. He freely made that video, and he freely passed along the false information, even lending it his support.

Remove the Video From YouTube and the Web

Personally, I think that the smartest thing he could possibly do right now, is remove that video from his website, from the YouTube website, and from wherever else his presentation can be found. Sadly, it is already too late for any serious level of damage control; because at the time that I first began to work on this series in September of 2011, Scott's video had already been viewed by almost one hundred thousand people on the YouTube website alone. Who knows how many other people have downloaded it, or else distributed it to other areas of the Internet. In short, not only has Scott suffered a major embarrassment because nothing occurred as he predicted, but his foolish video has seriously harmed -- and continues to harm -- our faith. Once again we Christians have become the laughingstock of ungodly mockers and their ilk, as a result of Scott's foolishness.

05-15-13 Update: While the video still seems to be available on Scott's website on his videos page, I just discovered that if you click on it in order to play it, instead of playing, it simply says "This video is private". I tried half a dozen other websites which had a copy of the video as well, and the results were exactly the same: "This video is private". Oddly enough, when I went to the YouTube website a few minutes ago and searched for the video title, I did find it. However, unlike the full-length version which is over an hour and a half long, and more than a gigabyte in file size -- which is what I have on my hard drive -- what I just found on YouTube consists of seven smaller 15-minute segments. Whether or not they are exactly the same as the version that I have, I don't know, and I really don't have the time -- nor the interest -- to find out.

Misguided Personal Speculations and Theories

From beginning to end, Scott's presentation is simply full of misguided personal speculation -- such as the supposed meaning of the name "Elenin" -- while at the same time, offering very limited Biblical fact. Yes, he does quote from the Scriptures, but the way that he interprets some verses is totally wrong. We have already seen how he attempted to incorporate the Hopi legend regarding the Blue Star and the Red Star Kachinas into his twisted theology. Allow me to give you another example.

Is Leonid Elenin a Fictitious Character?

According to some of the people who have been promoting this Comet Elenin hype, the comet was not really named after an amateur Russian astronomer named Leonid Elenin. Oh no; they claim that Mr. Elenin is simply a fictitious character who was dreamed up by who-knows-who.

Tragically, even Scott seems to fall for this nonsense. For example, near the beginning of his video, instead of saying that Comet Elenin "was found by an amateur astronomer out of Russia", he says that it "was allegedly found by an amateur astronomer out of Russia." He offers no serious or reasonable explanation to explain why he doubts this fact. A few minutes later, he makes a similar statement concerning Leonid Elenin where he again says "allegedly". Around the ten-minute mark, Scott makes yet another attempt to discredit Leonid Elenin when he mentions a video that appeared on the web. According to Scott, it may not really be Elenin in the video.

So if we accept Scott's contentions and all of this nonsense, not only did Leonid Elenin not discover the comet that bears his name, but he does not even exist at all; at least so say the conspiracy theorists.

ELE = Extinction Level Event?

As I mentioned in part one of this series, based on certain scenes that are seen in the Hollywood movie "Deep Impact", Scott McAllister and a number of other misguided conspiracy theorists began to promote the belief that the "Ele" in the name "Elenin" should really be written in uppercase letters -- ELE -- because in actuality, it signifies an "Extinction Level Event"; that is, something akin to a major asteroid or comet strike which would wipe out all life on the Planet Earth.

ELE + NIN = ELENIN?

But they had a problem. "ELE" obviously does not spell the full name "Elenin". Somehow, these "ingenious" people had to append a few words to ELE -- or Extinction Level Event -- in order to fully spell out the name "ELENIN". So, without even offering us any kind of an explanation regarding why they did this, they added the doom-filled phrase "Nibiru Is Nigh", or "Nibiru Is Near" to it. Thus ELE + NIN = ELENIN. Presto! How wonderful that we now know what "Elenin" really means! This silliness is included in this video which was made by a man who claims to hear from the Lord, and who wants his viewers to believe that he has Spiritual Discernment. After all, as he himself said at the beginning of the video, we need to wade through the nonsense in order to arrive at the truth. Sorry Scott, but it seems to me that you got stuck in the middle of the stream of deception, and are still wading in the muck yourself.

Another person's inventiveness took a different route. They claim that NASA uses the acronym NIC -- or Notable Impact Crater -- to signify a deep impact crater -- or NI Crater -- of an Extinction Level Event. For some strange reason which is never explained to us -- should we really be surprised? -- this individual simply dropped the final letter "C", added a final "N", and said that it stood for "Nemesis". In other words, according to this individual, "ELENIN" actually stands for "Extinction Level Event Notable Impact Nemesis" in the constellation Leo.

Leonids Meteor Shower

"Why the constellation Leo?" you may ask. Well, it turns out that these "bright" conspiracy theorists claim that the name Leonid -- which you will recall is the first name of the man who discovered Comet Elenin -- really refers to a very famous annual meteor shower. This meteor shower, which is associated with the comet Tempel-Tuttle, radiates from the constellation of Leo, and is thus referred to as the Leonids. This prolific meteor shower peaks in the month of November. This scientific fact has been used by conspiracy theorists such as Scott, to try to validate their claims regarding Comet Elenin; because at the time that I was completing the early version of this series during the end of the first week of November 2011, the Earth was passing through the remnants of Comet Elenin. Unless I am mistaken, Comet Elenin arrived from the direction of the constellation Leo. In short, these misguided doomsday sayers were predicting vast destruction to the Earth as a result of these facts.

Thus, through a combination of imagination and inventiveness, with a little bit of scientific fact thrown into the mix, we arrive at a supposedly "logical" definition of what the name "Leonid Elenin" really means. Let me remind you again that this is the kind of foolish nonsense that Scott promotes in his video, which he says may be his most important prophetic teaching to date. Oh the deception!

Trapped and Deceived by False Information

As I said earlier, while Scott mentions how important it is that we sift through all of the online nonsense in order to hopefully arrive at the truth, it becomes evident just from watching his "Comet Elenin Nibiru Planet X & The Day of The LORD" video that he has become both entrapped and deceived by the very same false information which he claims to shun. Furthermore, as I have already stated, in order to validate his own claims, from almost the very beginning of the video, he makes a conscious effort to cast doubt upon some of the scientific facts regarding Comet Elenin, which I have shared with you in this series.

My Personal Skepticism

Anyone who has read a sufficient amount of my work will know that I am not the most trusting person in the world. This is particularly the case when it concerns government figures, as well as corporate entities, religious leaders, certain people who are involved in the medical profession, lawyers, and of course, much of the information that we find on the Internet. If anything, I tend to be very skeptical and very doubtful about a lot of things. I do not accept things at face value. In the case of Bible Prophecy and doctrinal issues, people have to convince me directly from the Scriptures, before I will accept their particular point of view.

Audience Manipulation and Failed Predictions

However, sometimes facts are just facts, and we can't choose to ignore them or try to cast doubt upon them just because we do not like them, or because they conflict with what we want to believe. In Scott's case, he purposely endeavored to manipulate his audience into thinking the way that he thinks from the very beginning of his video, by using such words as "allegedly". Another way in which he endeavored to cultivate an attitude of paranoia, fear and mistrust of government with his audience was by revealing small pieces of controversial information, as well as by showing short segments of videos which were not even related to each other, and which he did not even seek to explain. He made one prediction after the other; all of which failed to come to pass. Consider the following points:

1. He mentioned Operation Paper Clip and how Nazi scientists were brought to the United States in order to work for the American rocket program. How this ties into Comet Elenin is beyond me. I can only theorize that perhaps he was implying that this same technology was now secretly being used to try to devise a way to either blow up or divert Comet Elenin, or perhaps even the fictional Nibiru itself, as we see in some popular sci-fi catastrophe movies. We really do not know for sure, because Scott does not say. He merely plants a subtle suggestion.

2. He mentioned how the Wide Infrared Space Telescope was shut down in February of 2011 -- supposedly for no apparent reason -- despite the wonderful discoveries which had been made with it. In other words, the message that Scott seemed to want to send to his audience with this comment was that NASA must have something to hide. However, upon conducting additional research for this series, what I discovered is that by October of 2010, the hydrogen coolant that was used in WISE had become depleted. Not only that, but the funding from NASA which would have financed the proposed WISE "warm mission" was not approved. As a result, WISE was extended for only four more months for a program called NEOWISE; the purpose of which was to search for asteroids and comets close to Earth orbit, using the remaining post-cryogenic detection capability of WISE.

3. He shared a portion of a NASA video which encourages NASA employees and their families to work on a Family Preparedness plan in the case of some unforeseen disaster. Scott's obvious intention with this scare tactic was to send the message that the US government was fully aware of an impending disaster as a result of Comet Elenin's approach to the Earth, and was thus warning its people to prepare for it.

4. He showed a Whitehouse letter regarding Near Earth Objects -- or NEO's -- again with no explanation regarding why he was even showing it. I suppose it was meant to serve as another scare tactic, and to indirectly state that the US government really knew what was going on, even if the regular citizenry did not know.

5. He noted that the coordinates which were associated with Comet Elenin point to an area that is located off the coast of Kamchatka, Russia. I have no idea what he was trying to say with this one, unless he was trying to suggest that this was the spot where Elenin would strike the Earth. Who knows.

6. Using the java animation that I included in part one, he attempted to correlate recent strong earthquakes dates with Comet Elenin's orbital location and planetary alignments. He claimed that the earthquakes were occurring due to reactions between the Sun and the comet, and also because of Elenin's hydrogen cyanide composition. Considering how small Elenin was, and its great distance from the Sun and the Earth at the time that these earthquakes occurred, it was really ludicrous to suggest that it played a direct role in causing any of the earthquakes. Thus, he theorized that the main culprits were the planetary alignments. However, apparently, he failed to take into considerations the millions of miles which separate the planets, which would have mitigated any possible effect from such alignments.

7. He claimed that by purposely downplaying the effects that Comet Elenin was having on the Earth, NASA was intentionally being deceptive. Furthermore, Scott claimed that contrary to what NASA was saying, Elenin must be a lot larger than three or four kilometers in diameter, in order to have the effects on the Earth that he believed it was having. In fact, he then proceeded to mention that some people were convinced that the comet was actually larger than the planet Jupiter. According to Scott, as a result, the Earth would experience three days of darkness on September 26, 2011 when Elenin blocked out the Sun due to its large size. Obviously, it did not happen.

8. He claimed that from November 2nd to November 7th of 2011, the Earth would be bombarded with Space debris because Comet Elenin supposedly picked up a lot of asteroids as it traveled through the Asteroid Belt. He claimed that "It's going to look like the stars are falling out of the heavens." Obviously, it never happened.

9. He claimed that the Earth might experience catastrophic earthquakes measuring 12 to 15 on the Richter Scale on November 7, 2011, when the Earth was aligned between Comet Elenin and the Sun. Again, it never happened.

Even before the video was over, it was easy to determine that the man was seriously misguided. For example, one set of dates which he highlighted for something major possibly happening was September 5-6, 2011. Nothing ever happened. That alone should have been a red flag for many Christians. He also claimed that in fulfillment of the Hopi prophecy, on September 11, 2011, Elenin might brighten up like a second Sun and appear with a blue tinge. Again, it did not happen, which was a second red flag for other Christians. In talking about the alignment of the Sun, Comet Elenin and the Earth on September 26, 2011, Scott said "That's going to be very catastrophic." There was nothing catastrophic about the day whatsoever. That was a third red flag for anyone whose eyes were open to the truth regarding this man.

If anything can be said regarding Scott's predictions, it is that they were catastrophic failures. That is the catastrophe in this sad story of profound deception by a man who claimed to be led by the Lord in his understanding, as well as in his pronouncements on the video.

Scott's Grand Finale and Mighty Climax

As I mentioned earlier, throughout the video, Scott's agenda appears to be to prepare his audience for a grand revelation which he will reveal in the closing moments of the video. In fact, he calls this alleged revelation "unbelievably amazing", "incredibly amazing", "the grand finale" and "a mighty climax" to his "lessons" in this video.

So exactly what has Scott been building the suspense towards? After pointing to some verses in the Bible to demonstrate how God set the constellations in the heavens to serve as signs to humanity, explaining the importance of Jewish feast days, and showing how Nibiru has supposedly passed through Gemini and Leo, Scott focuses his audience's attention on Revelation chapter twelve. As you may recall, this chapter describes a woman clothed with the Sun, with the Moon under her feet, and a crown of twelve stars on her head. This woman gives birth to a child who is caught up to Heaven -- meaning Jesus -- and then she is persecuted by the red dragon so that she is forced to flee into the wilderness where she is protected.

Using several different astronomy programs, Scott then shows how the orbits of the Sun, Moon, Venus, Saturn and Elenin all pass through the constellation of Virgo at the same time. He also mentions how the head of the constellation Virgo consists of twelve main stars, just like the woman in Revelation. This last point is debatable, because there are many faint stars in Virgo, and different cultures associate different stars with the constellation.

But Scott's primary "revelation" and grand finale -- which he took an hour and a half to lead up to is the following. At the same time that the tail of Comet Elenin is in Virgo's head -- which represents Revelation's twelve stars, according to Scott -- she is clothed with the Sun -- because the Sun is located in the upper portion of Virgo's body -- Venus is positioned in her womb -- representing Jesus who is called the Morning Star -- Saturn is also in her womb -- representing the dragon which is ready to devour the child -- and the Moon is also situated below Virgo's feet, just like in the Book of Revelation.

If you are wondering how Scott associated the planet Saturn with the dragon, he relied upon a crossover between Roman and Greek mythology. You see, the Greek equivalent of the Roman god Saturn was Cronus, or Kronos. Just as Cronus supposedly overthrew his own father, Uranus, Cronus was fearful that his sons would try to overthrow him as well. Thus, Cronus would devour the children which were born to him, just as the red dragon was set to devour the Christ child in Revelation.

Feast of Trumpets and Misguided Predictions

Aside from relying upon astronomy, ancient mythology, God's Word and conspiracy theories to form his crazy speculation -- which he became convinced was his most significant prophetic teaching to date, let's not forget -- Scott mentions the fact that all of these celestial alignments in Virgo were to occur during the two days of the Feast of Trumpets in September of 2011. As you will recall from part one, this was one of the three feast days during which he came to believe Christ might very well return. This is actually a common belief which has been embraced by certain Christian Zionists, of which Scott appears to be one.

In short, Scott became convinced -- and was trying to also convince his audience -- that the events which are described in Revelation chapter twelve, were actually being fulfilled in the constellation of Virgo in September 2011. As a result, he arrived at several "important" conclusions:

1. Christ was going to return very soon (meaning the Feast of Trumpets of 2011).
2. The Rapture would occur very soon as a result of Christ's Return.
3. The Great Tribulation would occur very soon. In his video,

Scott claims that this would be the result of occult forces fulfilling their agenda, by initiating World War III in the Middle East.

Disappointing Anticlimax

This then was Scott's supposed grand revelation which had him walking on clouds. After watching the video for an hour and a half, and then watching parts of it again and again so that I could extract precise quotes and other information from it so that I could include it in this series, rather than being met with an "unbelievably amazing", "incredibly amazing", "grand finale" and "a mighty climax", I encountered a disappointing anticlimax. I suppose that I really shouldn't use the word "disappointing", because after I realized how misguided the man is, I had no positive expectations anyway. I just wanted to see where he was going with it.

The fact of the matter is that nothing that Scott teaches in his video came to pass in a prophetic sense. There was really nothing prophetic about it whatsoever. It amounted to a very poor personal theory at best, which was haphazardly thrown together using astronomy, mythology, conspiracy theory, parts of the Bible, and personal conjecture. What Scott did is not that much different from what false prophet Tom Horn did with his "2012: Apollyon Rising" nonsense, which also failed to come to pass. Scott's theory is no different from all of the other failed predictions which have been made regarding Jesus' Return by the likes of Joseph Smith, the Jehovah's Witnesses, William Miller, Charles Taze Russell, Herbert W. Armstrong, William Marrion Branham, David Brandt Berg, Harold Camping, Jerry Falwell, Ronald Weinland, Jack Van Impe, and others who have made similar false predictions.

Please go to part five for the conclusion of this series.

Warnings Regarding False Prophets

As I point out in a number of other articles, the Bible is filled with verses which warn us to watch out for deceptive false prophets. In fact, it even advises us how we should respond to false prophets. Basically, we are to ignore them and not believe a word they say. Consider the following verses:

"But the prophet, which shall presume to speak a word in my name, which I have not commanded him to speak, or that shall speak in the name of other gods, even that prophet shall die. And if thou say in thine heart, How shall we know the word which the LORD hath not spoken? When a prophet speaketh in the name of the LORD, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the LORD hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him."
Deuteronomy 18:20-22, KJV

"The prophets prophesy falsely, and the priests bear rule by heir means; and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof?"
Jeremiah 5:31, KJV

"For they prophesy falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the LORD."
Jeremiah 29:9, KJV

"Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."
Matthew 7:15-20, KJV

"And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many . . . For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect."
Matthew 24:11, 24, KJV

"For false Christs and false prophets shall rise, and shall shew signs and wonders, to seduce, if it were possible, even the elect."
Mark 13:22, KJV

"For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."

Acts 20:29-30, KJV

"For such are false apostles, deceitful workers, transforming themselves into the apostles of Christ. And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works."
2 Corinthians 11:13-15, KJV

Sincere But Deceived

As I have already made sufficiently clear, the fact of the matter is that people such as Scott who were promoting this Comet Elenin nonsense, became very deceived and misguided, just like Harold Camping and the other individuals who I mentioned earlier in this series. While Scott and others are probably well-meaning and truly love the Lord, and were no doubt very sincere regarding their beliefs concerning the prophetic importance of Comet Elenin, it does not change the fact that they were still very wrong. There is no escape from this basic truth. They became deceived.

God-Inspired Prophecies Are Accurate

While such people may become offended by my position, there is simply no way that I will ever believe that they received their information from God by way of His Holy Spirit. People such as Scott may say "The Lord showed me this, and the Lord showed me that", but I am not convinced of it. As Jesus says in the previous verses that I shared with you, we will know a true Prophet of God by their fruits. That means accurate prophecies which come to pass precisely as they were given, without room for error. That is why I am forced to conclude that Scott's entire Elenin video was simply a fabrication of his own mind and spirit. If his predictions were truly of the Lord, then as the Prophet Ezekiel informs us, they would have come to pass. Consider this verse:

"And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them."
Ezekiel 33:33, KJV

False Prophecies Harm the Cause of Christ

As I explain in the aforementioned series, as well as in the series "Sorry . . . Jesus is Not Coming at Any Moment!", my main concern is that rather than advance the Cause of Christ, and the Message of Salvation, as with so many other false, wannabe prophets who have appeared in our modern times, their misguided pronouncements concerning Comet Elenin are going to do the exact opposite. In other words, such false predictions and misguided interpretations can only result in one thing; and that is in even more people mocking our faith, hardening their hearts, and becoming even more difficult to reach with the Gospel of Salvation. With good reason the Apostle Peter wrote the following in his second Epistle regarding wicked scoffers:

"Knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, And saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."

2 Peter 3:3-4, KJV

So as you can see, the end result is that as the false prophecies increase and fail to come to pass, the more our faith will suffer harm; because not only do we Christians begin to look like gullible, naive fools who will believe anything that happens to be uploaded to the Internet, but non-believers begin to doubt every single word that we say, including the all-important message of Salvation which we try to share with them.

The Devil's Expendables

In fact, personally, I have come to suspect that the Devil himself is behind this mischievous scheme to discredit us. In other words, as I explain in the Harold Camping series, I can't help but wonder if Satan purposely sets up these false prophets through his deceptions, and then he humiliates them when their misguided, false predictions fail to materialize. Such people are Satan's expendables. He uses them, abuses them, and then he just throws them away once they have been discredited by the world. But Satan doesn't care, because he has accomplished his purpose, which is to sow more seeds of doubt in the Word of God, and in His true messengers.

War of Thoughts and Words and Battle of the Mind

As I explain in other articles, it is indeed a war of words, and of ideas and beliefs, and our mind is the battleground. That is why God's Word instructs us to gird up the loins of our mind, to put on the helmet of Salvation, to bring every thought into captivity, and in fact to be renewed in our minds, as we can determine by the following verses

"Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ;"

1 Peter 1:13, KJV

"And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God:"

Ephesians 6:17, KJV

"Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ;"

2 Corinthians 10:5, KJV

"And be not conformed to this world: but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect, will of God."

Romans 12:2, KJV

In my view, Scott clearly did not do this. He allowed Satan to come into his thoughts, and fill him with all kinds of astronomical data, and mythological nonsense, which he then endeavored to mix together with God's Word and his own ideas, motivated by his personal desire for Christ's soon Return. The end result of such sloppy exegesis -- or interpretation of God's Word -- is that we not only have a growing list of end-of-the-world false prophets who have appeared on the world stage since our faith was born two millennia ago, but we also have an increasing number of scoffers and mockers as well, who feel totally justified in their rigid position.

Confusion for God's Sheep

Also of concern to me is how these false predictions and misguided interpretations of God's Word can affect weaker Christian brethren. In writing about the Gifts of Tongues and the Interpretation of Tongues, in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, the Apostle Paul wrote the following:

"For if the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself to the battle?"
1 Corinthians 14:8, KJV

In other words, these false predictions concerning Elenin -- or any other false prophecy for that matter -- can result in uncertainty and confusion for God's sheep. Why? Because they don't know who or what to believe, due to all of the nonsense that is being published and promoted on the Internet by these wayward and misguided prophets. In writing about the Gift of Prophecy in the very same chapter, the Apostle Paul wrote the following:

"For God is not the author of confusion, but of peace, as in all churches of the saints."
1 Corinthians 14:33, KJV

Well, tell me something. If our Heavenly Father is not the author of confusion, then who is? To reiterate, these people who make these wild claims regarding Comet Elenin, Nibiru, 2012 and the Mayan long calendar, and other such nonsense, are not just making an uncertain sound as the Apostle Paul writes in the previous verse. Rather, they are making false sounds, and sounds which can only result in confusion and uncertainty amongst God's sheep.

Expose False Prophets and Rebuke Them

Considering how serious of an issue false prophecy really is -- please note that false prophets in the Old Testament were stoned to death -- when our brethren in the Lord make these kinds of serious mistakes, it is very important that we don't seek to justify or cover up their errors; particularly when they can result in so much long-term damage to our faith. We need to expose and rebuke them publicly, in the hope that they will come to their senses and repent. Consider what we read in the following verses:

"Open rebuke is better than secret love."
Proverbs 27:5, KJV

"Them that sin rebuke before all, that others also may fear."

1 Timothy 5:20, KJV

"Brethren, if any of you do err from the truth, and one convert him; Let him know, that he which converteth the sinner from the error of his way shall save a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins."

James 5:19-20, KJV

Jesus Rebukes Apostles Due to Errors

Even Jesus did not hesitate to rebuke His own Disciples when they were in error. Such was the case when He had to rebuke Peter, because Peter did not want the Lord to die. There was also the occasion where the Apostles wanted to call fire down from the sky, because the people of a certain village did not want to receive Christ into their midst. Recall also the time that the Disciples tried to prevent the children from coming near to Jesus. Jesus was again irked and rebuked them, as we see by the following verses:

"From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee. But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men."

Matthew 16:21-23, KJV

"And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again. And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him. But when he had turned about and looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men."

Mark 8:31-33, KJV

"And it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, And sent messengers before his face: and they went, and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him. And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem. And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did? But he turned, and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of. For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village."

Luke 9:51-56, KJV

"Then were there brought unto him little children, that he should put his hands on them, and pray: and the disciples rebuked them. But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence."

Matthew 19:13-15, KJV

"And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them."

Mark 10:13-16, KJV

"And they brought unto him also infants, that he would touch them: but when his disciples saw it, they rebuked them. But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise enter therein."

Luke 18:15-17, KJV

Not only that, but as we saw earlier, Jesus did not hesitate to expose the false prophets either. The Lord and the Apostle Paul both referred to them as ravening wolves. As such, we should not be afraid to do the same thing today either when it becomes necessary. In my opinion, it does become necessary when their errors can have such a profound negative effect on the overall perception of our Christian faith.

No Malicious Intent But Deceived by Pride

As I noted earlier, in most cases, the people who make these mistakes are probably sincere, dedicated Christians. They are not trying to mislead people on purpose. I don't believe that there is malicious intent on their part. As we have seen, the problem is that they have become deceived, quite possibly as a result of their own pride and ego; although to be fair, this is not always the case. Thus, they become convinced in their heart that the Lord has revealed certain things to them, when maybe He really hasn't. Let's not forget that Satan knows the Scriptures. He can quote verses to us, exactly as he did with the Lord in Matthew chapter four. That is a rather unsettling thought, isn't it?

Satan is a Deceiver and False Angel of Light

So you see, that is one reason why misguided false prophets become convinced that they are preaching the truth. Satan is so crafty that he can even deceive the most well-meaning and dedicated Christian; if we are not extremely careful, and remain very close to the Lord. If there is one thing that I hope that you learn from this series, it is that we all need to be very careful regarding saying "Thus saith the Lord", or "The Lord told me", or "The Lord showed me", because maybe it wasn't really the Lord at all. Maybe it was really the Prince of Darkness -- Satan himself -- posing as an angel of light. As we read earlier:

"And no marvel; for Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light."

2 Corinthians 11:14, KJV

Be Slow to Speak and Make Predictions

For those of my readers who may feel the urge to proclaim yourselves Prophets and Apostles, I urge you to carefully consider the wisdom that is contained in the following group of verses:

"In the multitude of words there wanteth not sin: but he that refraineth his lips is wise."

Proverbs 10:19, KJV

"Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few."

Ecclesiastes 5:2, KJV

"A fool uttereth all his mind: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards."

Proverbs 29:11, KJV

"For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned."

Matthew 12:37, KJV

"Nay but, O man, who art thou that repliest against God? Shall the thing formed say to him that formed it, Why hast thou made me thus?"

Romans 9:20, KJV

"Wherefore, my beloved brethren, let every man be swift to hear, slow to speak, slow to wrath:"

James 1:19, KJV

In a word, if you really want to spare yourself from some unnecessary future embarrassment, then simply follow the wise advice that is contained in the previous verses, and keep your mouth shut, unless you are absolutely certain that a prophecy or prediction is of the Lord, and not just from your own mind, ego, vanity or even from Satan the deceiver and the Father of Lies himself. Please remember that once you publish something on the Internet, whether it happens to be a video, or a blog entry, or a full-length article, or a photograph, if enough people like it, it will spread rapidly like wildfire all over the place. As a result, you won't be able to retrieve every instance of it, no matter how hard you try, and no matter for how long you try. If you decide later that you got something wrong and were in error, and other people discover your error, you may just have to live with the embarrassing consequences of your original action when you first published it. You have been warned.

Closing Remarks

With these thoughts I will bring this series to a close. I trust that you have found it informative and enlightening, and I pray that it has been a blessing in your life. If you
