People in America really need to wake up, and they need to wake up FAST! As I have recently been stating in some of my other Bill's Bible Basics articles such as "Should Muslims Hold Public Office in America?", it should be quite evident to you by now that the simple truth of the matter is that radical Islamists aren't about integrating and assimilating into American society. To be rather pointed and clear, they are about slow infiltration, and eventual domination and subjugation. PERIOD! In other words, rather than accept and meld into their new host country, and into American society, radical Muslims expect America to actually adopt THEIR way of thinking, THEIR belief system, THEIR system of laws, and basically, everything which they left behind in their home country.

Well, if that is their true goal, and if they were so happy with the state of their OWN country, then why in the world didn't they just stay there in the first place? So I remain convinced that it is this radical Islamist ideology which motivates these troublemakers, and which compels them to do the things that they do and to say the things that they say. For those of you who still don't get it, the takeover of the United States is their only one true goal, and they are in no hurry to accomplish it. It is the Muslims' understanding that this is what is mandated by the Qur'an for them to do. This is the very strategic war doctrine which was expounded to them by their original founder and prophet, Muhammad.

If you don't believe me, then I encourage you to also read my 1998 six-part series entitled "Holy Qur'an and Islam: A Doctrine of Devils?". My friends, think about that. It has been almost twenty-nine years since I first published that series. Twenty-nine years. That's how long that I have been personally warning about the danger and scourge of radical Islam. And yet look at us in American today. The pacifists that we be -- including our very own Washington politicians -- the scourage of Islam very slowly continues to take over our land, just has it has been doing to an even greater degree across Europe and in Great Britain.

My friends, this amounts to a war strategy. It constitutes a very subtle war against Western values, Western forms of government, Western forms of finance, Westerns forms of conducting business, Western forms of family values, and of course, also Western forms of faith. Just ask any dedicated Muslim, and they will be very eager to tell you that there is no god but Allah, and Muhammad is his one true prophet. And according to Islamic belief, if you refuse to accept and acknowledge that, your head could potentially end up on the chopping block someday. Plain and simple.

So to reiterate this important point, in actuality, Islam is a radical, violent and dangerous political ideology that is dressed up as a religion. Well, if it is a religion, it most certainly is very different from the faith of peace that was taught by Jesus Christ! The tragedy here is that the radical Islamists know that modern trends, and time, appear to be on their side. All they have to do is to continue doing what they are now doing, and eventually, they could very well be victorious. If you doubt that this is so, then allow me to share some more eye-opening points with you. Perhaps these facts will shock a few of you, if that is what you really need in order to wake up.

A few days ago, I was looking at a photograph of one of the Muslims' protest marches within the United States that is available online. I am not even sure what the specific event was. However, it doesn't really matter, because the message derived from the photograph was very clear to me with zero ambiguity, in my view. Now the most shocking thing about the photograph is the fact that not a single American flag can be seen amongst the marchers. In contrast, the photograph is filled with flags sporting the primary colors -- red, green, black and white -- of foreign Islamist entities.

Let me ask you a very simple question. Exactly what are the Muslim marchers really saying by bearing those flags? Isn't it rather clear? What are YOU saying when you put a flag on your car, or perhaps on your porch, or maybe on a flag pole in your front yard? That's right. You are stating beyond a shadow of a doubt that you are a proud American who supports your government, your nation, and all that it stands for. In fact, you believe in it so much, that maybe you are willing to even die for it. Or perhaps you already served it in some capacity via military service.

Now think about those loud, radical Muslims who march down the streets with their flags, their shouts and their fists raised high in the air. For those of you who really don't understand the significance of that sea of foreign flags, the marchers are basically saying "This is the flag I am loyal to. This is the flag to which I owe my allegiance. This is the flag I am willing to die for. It is with this flag that I will conquer this land!" And that is just it my friends: conquer, and NOT be assimilated into the rest of American society. Convert US into THEM, and NOT them into us. Now do you get it? That is the path that radical Muslims are on.

Seriously, folks. What more do they need to say? Exactly how much clearer can they possibly make it than that? How much louder must they say it before some of you finally wake up? And by the way, what you see happening in some of America's streets, such as in the state of Michigan, is just part of the overall equation. The things that are said and shouted in America's streets is shouted even louder by some of the more radical Muslim clerics in mosques which are found all across America.

Exactly how many Muslim mosques are now scattered across the American homeland? It may surprise some of you to learn that at this current time, based on the most recent comprehensive American Mosque Survey, the official count stands at 2,769. However, it has been estimated that there may be more than 3,000 mosques at this current time. That is an average of sixty mosques per state. It is my understanding that it is precisely in those places where, fueled by hatred for the American way, the fires of radical Islam are both fanned and kept alive by extremist imams, some of whom have suddenly found themselves being deported from the United States. What we see happening in public marches is just the byproduct of what occurs in secret behind the doors of those mosques.

There is something else that is very important that you need to understand. The radical Islamists don't always conquer by brandishing a curved, sharp sword as they usually did in the centuries gone by. No, of course not. That would be way too obvious, and they would be stopped in their tracks. Today, they have other equally powerful weapons. One of them is the fact that upon entering a country, Muslims proceed to have very large families. This has in fact caused concern in both Israel, and across the European continent. As a result, in some of these places, the balance of power is now in serious jeopardy -- or soon will be -- due to Muslim demographics.

But there is another Islamic weapon which is directly tied to the Muslim propensity for having large families, and it is the power of the vote. Obviously, you can already figure out where I am going with this thought. In the United States at least, once those Muslim children have grown up and have reached voting age, they can indeed influence the outcome of an election.

Being as I already amply discuss New York City's Socialist Democrat mayor Zohran Mamdani in a two-part article called "Should Muslims Hold Public Office in America?", I won't be redundant and belabor the point here. Suffice it to say that I am still in shock that Mamdani won that election, based on the demographic makeup of that huge metropolis. But then we have other Muslim US politicians such as Ilhan Omar, who represents Minnesota, Rashida Tlaib, who represents the state of Michigan, André Carson who represents Indiana, and lastly, Lateefah Simon who represents the state of California.

But then we come to the very latest Muslim political conquest which occurred during the midterms on November 4, 2026. I am, of course, referring to none other than Michigan's very own Senator-elect, Abdul El-Sayed, who despite a strong campaign by the Republicans to defeat him, beat the odds, and became the very first Muslim senator in American history. Now think about that. As I noted earlier, one small step at a time, and not huge steps which may draw too much attention and expose the real agenda.

And boy has El-Sayed been setting off the fireworks in the conservative camp! For those of you who may not have heard yet, on November 6, 2026 during the recent Connect Arab America Empowerment Summit which took place in Chantilly, Virginia -- which is a suburb of the broader Washington, DC metropolitan area -- following his electoral victory, Abdul El-Sayed, referred to the state of Michigan as "the capital of Arab America." In that opening part of his speech, after he had introduced himself to his audience, El-Sayed's exact words were the following:

----- Begin Quote -----

"I'm honored to be the next United States senator from the great state of Michigan. Which of course -- I know we're here in D.C., which of course is the capital of the United States of America, but Michigan is the capital of Arab America."

----- End Quote -----

Wait! What? Arab America? And here I thought that there is really only one America, much of which still embraces some flavor of Christianity for the most part. And yet, as can be plainly seen, my friends, those were in fact his exact words without exaggeration. Now, while El-Sayed may have just been speaking in a cultural sense, being as Michigan does possess a high Muslim population, nevertheless, we must wonder if a double entendre was intended by this statement. Of course, only Mr. El-Sayed himself knows for certain, I suppose.

At this point in our discussion, let me interject a piece of information which seems to be raising some controversy. From what I have personally read, certain news outlets have been reporting that the state of Michigan possesses the highest concentration of Muslims in the continental United States. I have seen this said multiple times, and it is particularly popular on the social networks. Personally, I had assumed it to be true as well. However, now I am not so certain that it is true.

Based on some quick personal online research, what I learned is that while Michigan does indeed have a high concentration of Muslims, according to statistics provided by Google's own AI bot, Gemini -- which we should take with a large grain of salt -- Michigan does NOT appear to possess the very highest concentration of Muslims. In fact, at this current time in November of 2026, there are five US states which possess a Muslim population which well surpasses that of the state of Michigan.

Furthermore, upon visiting the World Population Review site, I discovered that it provides us with the following table, which reveals the estimated 2026 Muslim population of each of the fifty US states. The figures below show the estimated Muslim population of each state, based on the Census figures from 2020, with an estimated 28.88% growth rate since that time. As you may know, the US Census only occurs every ten years, which means that the next one won't occur until 2030.

One point we need to consider is the overall population of each state, as well as the population of the country as a whole, in order to maintain a proper perspective regarding this entire issue.

Now, according to the World Population Review website, and a few other statistics-related sources such as the U.S. Census Bureau and Worldometers, the overall, late 2026 population of the Unites States stands somewhere between 343 million people and 349 million people. If we take World Population Review's higher figure of 349,669,454, and divide 4,446,380 by that, we find that the estimated 2026 Muslim population constitutes just 1.271% of the overall population of this country. That is it folks. Muslims don't even reach 1.3% of our total population! Why is this figure so important to us? Continue reading and you will soon find out.

One of the problems is the mainstream media, which is all about money, profit and expanding their level of viewership. As such, they won't hesitate to share the juiciest facts -- assuming they are the facts -- and stretch and distort the truth, if need be. Either that, or they will intentionally omit certain facts which may be contrary to the narrative they are trying to promote. And so, it comes as no surprise that we are often reminded by some news agencies that the state of Michigan has the very highest concentration of Arab Americans in the United States, particularly in cities like Dearborn and Hamtramck, which have both a prominent Muslim majority population and a Muslim majority local government.

But guess what? As I have just revealed to you, they are NOT telling us the truth regarding Michigan's Muslim population. Yes, Michigan has a considerable number of Muslims, but they do NOT represent the highest number in the United States. As we have seen, New York occupies that position with 724,475 Muslims, and that figure may very well explain the electoral victory of New York City's Socialist Democrat mayor, Zohran Mamdani.

But my key point here is this: by concentrating on these points, and by painting places such as Dearborn as hotspots of Muslim radicalism and discontent, the mainstream media keep their stories alive, and the cash flowing into their coffers. Frequently publishing photos of angry Muslims who are marching in city streets only helps to strengthen the narrative which these news agencies are trying to promote. They also cause us to keep our eyes focused on one thing, while something else that is important may possibly be occurring elsewhere.

The mainstream media is not alone when it comes to this game of deception, my friends. This ties in directly to something else. As some of you will know, certain segments of our very own American government use such events to psychologically manipulate us, so that we will adopt a particular worldview, and think, vote or act in a certain way. It is fair to say that the mainstream media and the government are really bed fellows, and partners in crime, and the mainstream media is often the propaganda organ of the government.

So what is the purpose of this game? Aside from what I have already told you, it concerns a tactic which has been used by national governments -- and by global and colonial powers -- for literally centuries. As I've explained previously in a few other Bill's Bible Basics articles, whether it occurs on an international, national or local level, by creating conflicting opinions and dividing people, they become easier to manipulate and control. Throw in financial hardship, and the people become even easier to control, because they're so busy just struggling to survive, that they couldn't rise up against an oppressive government, even if they wanted to. Think about that.

This is an issue I discuss more at length in articles such as "Gaslighting: We Are Being Manipulated and Surveilled", which I encourage you to read. As for me, I've never lived in or passed through the state of Michigan. As such, I am unable to honestly say what really goes on there, and I do not trust the mainstream media, or the government, to tell me.

In fact, to be quite honest -- I hope that you are as well -- when it comes to the affairs of the world -- and not my personal faith which remains quite intact -- I really don't know how much of what I currently believe is actually true. Why do I say this? Because both the government, as well as the mainstream media, have created such a complicated web of deception, and an onion which consists of unfathomable layers. We may convince ourselves that we truly understand what is going on in the world, but do we really? So do you have the humility to admit the same thing?

Yet despite the obvious agenda of the mainstream media, and even our own government, we still cannot simply ignore the controversial statement which was uttered by Senator-elect, Abdul El-Sayed, when he referred to Michigan as the capital of Arab America. In my opinion, this is a very divisive and inflammatory thing to say, and El-Sayed undoubtedly knows it. Yet he said it anyway, as if he wanted to initiate some kind of national firestorm, which his words most certainly have.

As you may have heard or read, even Erika Kirk -- who is the chairwoman and CEO of Turning Point USA , and also the widow of its assassinated co-founder, Charlie Kirk -- was quick to jump on the bandwagon, and refute El-Sayed's rather divisive us-versus-them statement. As she retorted, there is only one America, and it is the United States of America. Furthermore,

I will add that its predominant religion is Christianity -- as it has been for more than 250 years -- and NOT Islam.

So despite the fact that some people still wish to deny it, in recent years, the radical Muslims within the USA, through both their abrasive words and their public acts, such as the public marches, have in fact made their agenda rather clear. Many of them have plainly stated exactly what they desire to do in and to America, instead of telling us how they intend to serve America's interests, while being good citizens at the same time.

Yet sadly, many Americans still remain totally asleep while the enemy gains a stronger foothold town by town, city by city, state by state, and vote by vote. So how many more new Muslim US Representatives or US Senators will it take before you realize that something is going on which may not be in our best interest as both Americans, and as Christians? Are you ready for an American Caliphate? Okay, perhaps saying that is a little too extreme, but you get my point, right?

As I was just telling a friend of mine recently, I look at what happened in a right-leaning, conservative, Republican majority state like Texas, with a popular governor like Greg Abbott, who served three terms from 2014 to 2026, and I am totally aghast, even more so than by the surprise that just occurred in New York City not too long ago. Where is this voting madness coming from? How in the world could Texans be so foolish? After all, they've just voted for a very liberal governor-elect who supports things like transgender rights, as well as for a liberal senator-elect -- James Talarico -- who claims to be a Christian, and yet the man also supports abortion, same-sex "marriage" and transgender rights. He is no Christian according to God's Word!

All these years, I have personally viewed the state of Texas as a Conservative stronghold, and now I am really beginning to wonder if I have been sorely mistaken. And then there is the really big question: If a large, self-sufficient state such as Texas falls to both Democratic liberalism, as well as to Muslim influences, what does that mean for the rest of the country in the not-too-distant future?

For those of my readers who may be wondering why I included Muslim influence in the previous paragraph, let me refer you again to the aforementioned two-part article called "Should Muslims Hold Public Office in America?". I believe that it is in that particular article where I discuss the community of EPIC City, which is located just outside of Josephine, Texas. And you thought that Muslims were just infiltrating Michigan, Minnesota and New York City. Ha! Boy are you in for a surprise!

My friends, I said it earlier in this article -- and not for the first time -- and I'll say it yet again. Radical Muslims are most certainly NOT about integration and assimilation into American society, so please get that misguided thought out of your head. Radical Muslims -- not the passive ones -- are in fact focused on invasion, infiltration, domination, and eventually subjugation of non-Muslims. That is what the Qur'an has taught them and instructed them to do. That is what marks a person as a faithful Muslim. Conquest is their Muslim duty. Conquest has been in their blood for centuries!

That is exactly what is drilled into their heads from the time that they are young. Radical Muslims will settle for no less, because their religion demands it of them. They do NOT want to accept you and your American way of life. Instead, as I said earlier, they want you to accept them, and THEIR way of life, and all of the religious and political baggage that come along with it.

Now we come to another part of the problem. The sad truth is that there are so many Americans -- and this includes a lot of high-profile Washington politicians, as well as a lot of Christians -- who are AFRAID to speak the truth concerning this controversial issue. Why so? Because they are afraid of being accused of Islamophobia. They are also afraid of being called a racist, or a bigot, or a hater, or whatever silly labels some people like to use against them.

The uncomfortable truth is that such people have bowed so low before political correctness, that they are afraid to speak a single word of protest, out of fear of offending somebody, or because they are concerned that it might bring retribution upon themselves, and who wants that, right? So they remain very quiet and they keep their heads low, while the nation decays from within, as radical, foreign termites perform their hidden dirty work. In other words, just like the rest of the sheeple, they just go with the flow, and they don't make any waves, even though they know that there is something seriously wrong with America. Such people have been totally neutralized through a very subtle campaign of constant peer pressure.

When I see these images of these public Islamic gatherings in American cities and towns, in whatever form they take, and for whatever reason they congregate in this fashion, it really bothers me to see public authorities -- such as the police officers, for example -- ushering them along, as they try to maintain the peace and avoid violence.

Why? Why? Why? What is wrong with such people? Are they too in such fear for their lives? Or are they worried about being accused of being Islamophobes? Or maybe they are afraid that they might lose their jobs. Perhaps they are concerned that they might neglect to fulfill their constitutional duty if they refuse to assist those angry, radical Muslim marchers. And yes, that is precisely what some of these weak people do when their actions are questioned. In other words, they will remind you that the US Constitution grants American citizens certain rights and privileges, including freedom of speech and freedom of religion. Yes, that is indeed true. However, we still have to draw the line somewhere when it comes to what amounts to extreme and dangerous radicalism. Don't you agree?

Then there are those Christians who fall back on the Bible, and who remind us of what the Scriptures have to teach us concerning caring for the poor, the fatherless, the widow, and the downtrodden. However, my friends, allow me to ask you two simple questions. The first question is this:

Do you honestly believe that when the Lord gave those Laws to Moses, that His intention was for the Israelites to be so kind, and so helpful to foreigners in their midst, that one day those same foreigners in their land would outnumber them, and eventually even reign over them and dominate them? Now, the Bible does make clear that God did in fact allow some of the enemies of Israel to prevail, to not be defeated, and to even dwell in their midst. But why did God allow this? We are told that it was to test the Israelites, and likewise to keep them spiritually on their toes. That's why.

According to the Scriptures, following the time of Moses and his successor, Joshua, God raised up judges in Israel to lead the people. But even during that period, the Israelites began to backslide, rebel against the Lord, and break the covenant which He had made with them. Thus, we read the following in the Book of the Judges:

"And the anger of the LORD was hot against Israel; and he said, Because that this people hath transgressed my covenant which I commanded their fathers, and have not hearkened to my voice; I also will not henceforth drive out from before them any of the nations which Joshua left when he died: That through them I may prove Israel, whether they will keep the way of the LORD to walk in it, as their fathers kept it, or not. Therefore the LORD left those nations, without driving them out speedily, neither did he deliver them into the hand of Joshua."
Judges 2:20-23, KJV

So to rephrase my previous question, do we help people to such a degree that it may lead to our own extinction? Is that what God requires of us? I don't think so. What I do believe is that in accordance with the Scriptures, we should strive to help those people who come to us in need, according to our personal ability. However, at the same time, I am convinced that we need to obey the Scriptures insofar as this subject is concerned, while at the same time, not neglecting to take into consideration the realities of our modern day.

What do I mean by this? The Israelites helping the foreigners who dwelt in their land is NOT the same as allowing millions of people to cross your southern border, who then become a burden on your health care system, on your education system, on your social services system, etc. That is why I said that some Christians take the Scriptures out of context. They seem to want to live like ancient Israel, when that is clearly NOT the world that we live in today. Now do you understand?

Please go to part two for the conclusion of this article.

Continuing our discussion from part one, so you see, as I just explained to you, in my view, some of those Christians who adopt this attitude that we should be nice and lay out the red carpet for everyone who arrives at our borders -- including radical Muslims who have no intention of really ever becoming contributing members of our American society -- and who point to the Scriptures to try to justify their actions, are taking said Bible verses out of context. Yes, as I already said, we should strive to be loving and kind to all people, and if they come to us seeking help, we should try to help them as much as lies within our personal means. Likewise we should strive to live at peace with them. After all, even the Apostle Paul wrote the following:

"If it be possible, as much as lieth in you, live peaceably with all men."
Romans 12:18, KJV

It is for that reason, and others, that while I am strongly opposed to the precepts of the Islamic religion, and while I wholly disagree with abortion, with the LGBTQ agenda and with transgenderism, with America's constant need to go to war in some region of the world, and with a number of other issues, I do not go out like some maniac and yell in people's faces. I don't bother my neighbors. I don't blast women who arrive at abortion clinics. I don't stand on a street corner and condemn every person who walks by. That is just not me. Not only that, but at my age, and given my declining health, I couldn't do it even if I wanted to, which I don't. I live a rather quiet, peaceful, secluded life where most of my time is dedicated to serving the Lord.

The former is simply not my modus operandi. Instead, God has given me a different gift, which I view as a rather powerful gift. That is the simple gift of writing, which I have been doing for the past thirty-three plus years. They say that the pen is mightier than the sword. Well, all I can tell you with a degree of certainty, is that since I first set up my first website so many years ago, literally millions of people have visited it, and have been given the opportunity to learn the truth regarding God's holy Word.

Now, lest somebody try to throw things back in my face, let me also add that while I personally do not do those things which I mentioned a moment ago, neither do I condemn those Christians who do them. In fact, just so you know, for some fifteen solid years of my life, I did in fact engage in a more public ministry. I stood on street corners and walked the streets of cities in four different locations around the world. I also visited a few prisons, witnessed at times from door-to-door, learned to play the guitar and engaged in a musical ministry for a time, and more. Of course, that was when I was a lot younger and had more energy, vitality and strength, and fewer health issues.

As I have explained on previous occasions, I believe, as we are told in the Bible, that we are each given our particular ministry by the Lord. We each have our special calling which God has reserved for us. He knows our skills, and He'll give us what suits us best. The Apostle Paul explains this quite well in 1 Corinthians 12. We can't all be a hand, a foot or a leg, for how then would the body properly function? So as Paul writes, we must each abide in the calling wherein we have been called. Please consider the following set of Bible verses:

"Let every man abide in the same calling wherein he was called . . . Brethren, let every man, wherein he is called, therein abide with God."
1 Corinthians 7:20, 24, KJV

"Yea, so have I strived to preach the gospel, not where Christ was named, lest I should build upon another man's foundation: But as it is written, To whom he was not spoken of, they shall see: and they that have not heard shall understand."

Romans 15:20-21, KJV

"But contrariwise, when they saw that the gospel of the uncircumcision was committed unto me, as the gospel of the circumcision was unto Peter; (For he that wrought effectually in Peter to the apostleship of the circumcision, the same was mighty in me toward the Gentiles:) And when James, Cephas, and John, who seemed to be pillars, perceived the grace that was given unto me, they gave to me and Barnabas the right hands of fellowship; that we should go unto the heathen, and they unto the circumcision."
Galatians 2:7-9, KJV

"For we dare not make ourselves of the number, or compare ourselves with some that commend themselves: but they measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise. But we will not boast of things without our measure, but according to the measure of the rule which God hath distributed to us, a measure to reach even unto you. For we stretch not ourselves beyond our measure, as though we reached not unto you: for we are come as far as to you also in preaching the gospel of Christ: Not boasting of things without our measure, that is, of other men's labours; but having hope, when your faith is increased, that we shall be enlarged by you according to our rule abundantly, To preach the gospel in the regions beyond you, and not to boast in another man's line of things made ready to our hand. But he that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord. For not he that commendeth himself is approved, but whom the Lord commendeth."
2 Corinthians 10:12-18, KJV

Returning to our primary topic of discussion, as I said, we should be kind and helpful to others when it is within our ability to do so. We should also strive to peacefully exist with all people, yet not at the expense of backing down from or compromising our personal Christian beliefs and convictions. Yet here comes the pinch.

What do you do when those very same people -- meaning the radical Muslims -- don't really want to live peaceably with you? What do you do when they do not really appreciate the country which has adopted them, and particularly when they even try to force you to adopt THEIR customs and THEIR way of life, THEIR religion, THEIR judicial system, and THEIR political ideology? In fact, what do you do when they even establish closed communities where non-Muslims are not even welcome? Again, please refer to EPIC City which is located not far from Josephine, Texas.

In total contrast to this radical Muslim ideology, I want you to carefully consider the attitude which Ruth -- who in the future would become the wife of Boaz, and who was also an ancestor of Jesus Christ -- adopted after her Israelite husband had died, when her mother-in-law -- Naomi -- chose to return to Israel from Moab, where she and her two sons had dwelt for a number of years:

"And Ruth said, Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest, I will go; and where thou lodgest, I will lodge: thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God: Where thou diest, will I die, and there will I be buried: the LORD do so to me, and more also, if ought but death part thee and me."
Ruth 1:16-17, KJV

Wow! What a difference! Ruth had the right attitude! She was humble! She did NOT go to Israel with the attitude that she would somehow make Israel like her home country, Moab. She did NOT go to Israel with the goal of forcing the Israelites to adopt the religion of the Moabites, much less the politics of Moab, or the judicial system of Moab, or anything else for that matter. In fact, as you just read, Ruth even went as far as to say that she would adopt the God of Israel as her God.

Can you imagine radical Islamists coming to the USA, and then saying that they'll forsake Allah and Muhammad, and that they will embrace God the Father and His beloved Son, Jesus Christ, instead? In my view, that is how radical Ruth's conversion must have been! That dear woman went all the way. She was not a half-baked believer! She put her whole heart into it!

Clearly, Ruth wasn't like those loud-mouthed, angry, radical Muslims who march in America's streets. Ruth's desire from the start was to integrate and assimilate into the society of Israel, which is the exact opposite of what some Muslims in America want to do. Do you see the clear difference? And because Ruth was very humble, and so very willing to embrace Israelite culture, God truly blessed her, and as I mentioned earlier, she in fact became an ancestor of Jesus Christ! Now how about THAT!

Before moving on, I feel that it is very important that you fully understand exactly who I am targeting in this article. In case you haven't noticed, I have been very careful to not paint everything with a broad brush. In other words, while my Christian faith requires that I express my opposition to the misguided beliefs, practices and precepts of Islam, I've carefully chosen my words so that you hopefully understand that I am NOT targeting all Muslims who reside within the confines of the United States of America. I am in fact only targeting the radical Islamists who wish us and our nation harm. I am targeting those Muslims who have demonstrated no desire whatsoever to integrate, and to assimilate, into our American society, and who in fact want to make our country like the country they came from. It's not going to happen!

While I may not agree with their religion, nevertheless, I do recognize that based on the US Constitution, they do have the right to both believe and live as they desire. Furthermore, I recognize that many Arab Americans and Muslims are just like you and me, in the sense that we all face the very same daily struggles with the high cost of living, with raising our own children, with medical issues, with education and employment challenges, and basically, with just trying to survive as we each endeavor to keep our heads above water in this modern, fast-paced world. I recognize that many of them do want to simply live their lives in peace and not cause any trouble.

Earlier, I mentioned that I had two questions, or two main points that I wanted to impress upon you. The second one is this. Personally, I am convinced that the original framers of our country's Constitution -- some of whom were devout Christians -- never intended for that historic document to be interpreted in such a way, that some day, we God-fearing Christians would suddenly find ourselves, and our country, under the yoke and domination of foreigners who embrace a non-Christian religion.

My dear friends, think about this. The colonists had barely broken free from King George III and Great Britain. One of the goals of the colonists -- particularly the Puritans -- was the ability to freely practice their Christian faith as they deemed it proper. So I don't believe that the Founding Fathers would purposely include language in the nation's new Constitution, which would allow it to be in danger, or which would leave a legal door open, so that they would again fall under any form of foreign domination, and particularly not by a non-Christian invasion force.

Now, if you personally doubt the strong Christian background of any of those devout, God-fearing men -- some atheists in America actually do resist this truth -- then I suggest that you very carefully read the following quotations which were either spoken or written by some of this country's Founding Fathers. Their message, and their faith in, and reliance on the Christian God, is very clear to me. What do you think?:

----- Begin Quote -----

"Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are indispensable supports. In vain would that man claim the tribute of patriotism, who should labor to subvert these great pillars of human happiness, these firmest props of the duties of men and citizens . . .Let it simply be asked: Where is the security for property, for reputation, for life, if the sense of religious obligation deserts the oaths which are the instruments of investigation in courts of justice."

-- George Washington, 1st US President, 1789 to 1797, Founding Father

"The general principles on which the Fathers achieved independence were the general principles of Christianity."

-- John Adams, 2nd US President, 1797-1801

"Can the liberties of a nation be thought secure when we have removed their only firm basis, a conviction in the minds of the people that these liberties are of the gift of God, [and] that they are not to be violated but with his wrath? Indeed, I tremble for my country when I reflect that God is just: that his justice cannot sleep forever."

-- Thomas Jefferson, 3rd US President, 1801-1805, author of the Declaration of Independence

"The only true basis of all government [are] the laws of God and nature. For government is an ordinance of Heaven, designed by the all-benevolent Creator"

-- Samuel Adams, Statesman, political philosopher, Founding Father

"The birthday of the nation is indissolubly linked with the birthday of the Savior. The Declaration of Independence laid the cornerstone of human government upon the first precepts of Christianity."

-- John Quincy Adams, 6th US President, 1825 to 1829

"In regard to this Great Book, I have but to say, it is the best gift God has given to man. All the good the Savior gave to the world was communicated through this book. But for it, we could not know right from wrong. All things most desirable for man's welfare, here and hereafter, are to be found portrayed in it."

-- Abraham Lincoln, 16th US President, 1861 to 1865

"Now, the best religion the world has ever had is the religion of Christ. A man or a community adopting it is virtuous, prosperous, and happy . . . What a great mistake is made by him who does not support the religion of the Bible!"

-- Rutherford B. Hayes, 19th US President, 1877-1881

"I assume the arduous and responsible duties of president of the United States, relying upon the support of my countrymen and invoking the guidance of Almighty God. Our faith teaches that there is no safer reliance than upon the God of our fathers, who has so singularly favored the American people in every national trial and who will not forsake us so long as we obey his commandments and walk humbly in his footsteps."

-- William McKinley, 25th US President, 1897 to 1901

"The teachings of the Bible are so interwoven and entwined with our whole civic and social life that it would be literally -- I do not mean figuratively, I mean literally -- impossible for us to figure to ourselves what that life would be if these teachings were removed. We would lose almost all the standards by which we now judge both public and private morals; all the standards toward which we, with more or less of resolution, strive to raise ourselves."

-- Theodore Roosevelt, 26th US President, 1901 to 1909

"The same revolutionary beliefs for which our forebears fought are still at issue around the globe -- the belief that the rights of man come not from the generosity of the state but from the hand of God."

-- John F. Kennedy, 35th US President, 1961 to 1963

----- End Quotes ----

Clearly then, the United States was founded upon Christian principles; and as some of these great men noted, America would only continue to prosper, as long as it continued to adhere to faith in God, and to the principles of the Bible. Did you get that, my friends? Those wise men said and wrote THE BIBLE! They most certainly did NOT say the holy Qur'an and the principles of Sharia. That is to say, Islamic law. In a word, my friends, there is NO ROOM for radical Islam in the United States. It is totally incompatible with and quite antithetical to the Christian foundation of our country. As such, the radical termites must be removed from our midst by whatever means necessary before it is too late, and our very national house really begins to crumble.

Now, I've spent considerable time in this article explaining to you that the threat of radical Islam in our country is in fact real. However, there is still one vital question which we need to address, and that is the following. Exactly how big and how dangerous is this threat? Is it as big and as bad as the mainstream media and the government would have us to believe?

Well, my friends, after everything I have said up until this point, you may be surprised by my answer. But then again, if you've been paying close attention, perhaps you already know the answer and won't be surprised in the least. We've already established that based on the available statistics, the Arab American and Muslim population of the United States stands at under 1.3%. Of that 1.3%, I would like to believe that most of the Muslims who reside within the United States are very civilized, peace-loving citizens, similar to you and I, who are not looking for trouble, and who simply want to live in peace with everyone else. Do you believe that this is a fair assessment?

In other words, similar to other radical groups which often make the news headlines, is it possible that their bark is really worse than their bite, and that they're just another loud-mouthed vocal minority? Stated another way, is it even possible that the noise we hear from these Islamic radicals is purposely being amplified by the entities who control us all from behind the scenes, so that we will choose to react in a certain way? After all, history proves that governments do have a propensity for creating both internal and external enemies for the purpose of justifying their actions to their constituents. In short, are we being manipulated? I'll leave it up to you to answer that question for yourself.

With these thoughts, I will bring this article to a close. It is my hope that you have found it informative, enlightening, and I pray that it has been a blessing in your life as well.
